Uneasy Quiet in Birmingham as Truce Ends Crisis

Negro Leaders Drawing Plans for Drive to Register More Voters

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An uneasy quiet reigned in Birmingham Saturday as Negro leaders mapped plans for a voter registration drive on the heels of a truce in the racial crisis.

Behind the scenes Negroes said they were moving from house to house in an effort to instill renewed efforts toward voter registration.

Despite settlement—on the surface—of issues in this city's six-week racial crisis, more than 500 Alabama highway patrolmen still patrolled streets. Department of Conservation agents remained on standby. Police and sheriff's deputies were jammed into Negro areas.

So-Called Truce

City officials and Alabama Gov. George Wallace scoffed at a bilateral citizen's committee agreement on proposals to end the conflict, in which more than 2,000

Negroes were arrested and fire hoses and police dogs brought into play to control seething throngs of Negro demonstrators.

Staunch segregationist Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor, who directed the arrests and repulsed the crowds, said the agreement was "the lyingest face-saving statement that ever was issued."

"We've licked them and licked them good," he declared.

Gov. Wallace called the agreement a "so-called truce," and said the ceasing of demonstrations was brought about by beefed-up law enforcement.

Won't Interfere

Connor, however, said he would not interfere if businessmen wished to integrate their lunch counters, one of the key points the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Middle East Latest Area To Draw Kennedy Attention

BY BAKER MARSH
Chicago Daily News Service

President Kennedy's troubles range across the world from the Caribbean to Southeast Asia. This week he sought to calm a restive area in between—the Middle East.

"We strongly oppose the use of force in the Middle East," he told a news conference. "We also seek to limit the spread of Communism in the Middle East."

When the President spoke of opposing "Force," he apparently meant use of force by the Middle Eastern states themselves. He made clear that the United States would act outside the United Nations if necessary to bring stability to the area—and that could mean U.S. force.

At the same time that the President spoke it was revealed that U.S. planes and paratroops would take part in "training exercises" in Saudi Arabia, a particularly jittery part of a jittery area. A few weeks ago units of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean were alerted when Jordan seemed to be in more than the usual trouble.

Developments Among Arabs

The new focus on the Middle East goes back to last February when the government of Iraq was bloodily overthrown. This was followed by a quieter revolution in Syria.

Next came the proposal for a new United Arab Republic to consist of Egypt, Syria and Iraq.

In the meanwhile the Imam (ruler) of Yemen had been tossed out by a military coup and had won the backing of Saudi Arabia. His efforts to regain power were thwarted by Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser, who sent some 20,000 of his troops to back the revolutionaries—who still are in power.

Amid all this tinkering with the status quo Arab Jordan and Israel had good reason to ponder their future. Moths in Jordan rioted in favor of their country joining the proposed new U.A.R. Young King Hussein had to call on his loyal Bedouin troops to maintain control.

If Jordan should get drawn onto the blueprint of the new U.A.R., Israel would be surrounded by a unified Arab state.

Israel Looks to U.S.

Ever alert to this danger, Israel's premier David Ben-Gurion called for a U.S.-Israeli defense agreement that would commit the United States to come to Israel's aid if the Jewish state were attacked.

As an alternative, Ben-Gurion called for a joint U.S.-Soviet guarantee of Middle East borders.

The United States already is a party to an agreement signed in 1950 by which the United States, Britain and France guarantee the Middle East boundaries.

The shifting sands of Middle East power were emphasized when it appeared this week that the idea of a new U.A.R. might never be consummated.

The new Syrian government, organized by the Ba'athist Socialist Party, believes in Arab unity but is unhappy about putting too much power in Nasser's hands.

In reply, pro-Nasser elements staged a series of demonstrations and riots.

Zero Hour Approaching for Historic U.S. Space Probe

Astronaut Gordon Cooper engages technicians in earnest conversation at Cape Canaveral where he is getting ready for Tuesday's orbital mission. Astronaut Gordon Cooper Studying Flight Plan for 22-Orbit Mission Tuesday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Gordon Cooper concentrated on his bookwork and muscle tone Saturday as preparations moved smoothly ahead for his scheduled Tuesday departure on the nation's most extensive man-in-space adventure.

The spaceport was calm, unusually so this close to launch time. An official of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said he couldn't recall a preflight weekend when there was so little excitement among those connected with the project.

"There's no panic, no last-minute fire drills," he said.

If no hitch develops, Cooper will be lifted into space sometime between 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Tuesday. His Faith 7 space vehicle will be shoved into a 17,500-mile-an-hour orbit 100 to 170 miles above the earth. His planned mission will cover 22 orbits, or nearly 600,000 miles in 34 hours.

U. S. Prepares For Showdown Over Laos

Sources Say Reds Sent Fresh Troops Into Neutral Nation

BY ROY ESSOYAN
VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—The United States appears to be preparing for a possible showdown in Laos.

Well-informed sources say neighboring Communist North Vietnam recently introduced into the contour couch of fresh troops into Laos and the United States responded by providing arms and ammunition to the neutralist forces of Gen. Kong Le and anti-Communist right-wing Gen. Phoumi Nosavan.

An estimated nine battalions of North Vietnamese troops were previously known to be stationed in eastern Laos guarding pro-Communist Pathet Lao strong points and the Ho Chi Minh Trail, the Communist supply route from North Viet Nam to Communist guerrillas operating in South Viet Nam.

Request Arms

American arms are being supplied, according to informed sources here, at the request of the royal Laotian government under the Geneva accords of July 1962.

The official U.S. policy is still firmly committed to maintenance of the neutral coalition government in Laos as laid down by the Geneva accords. U.S. spokesmen maintain these accords for neutrality hold the only hope for peace in this strategic Southeast Asian kingdom.

One Western source said: "If the Pathet Lao is willing to restore the cease-fire, return territory they overran last month and resume peace talks, a renewed civil war may yet be prevented."

Plan Special Observance of Paper Week

Fox Valley Mills To Sponsor Tours, Open House Parties

Twenty-six paper mills, including 10 in the Fox Valley area, are planning special observances this week in recognition of Wisconsin Paper Week.

This is the first time such a state recognition has been set up, and to some extent, it is being "kept in the family." That is, men, they gave the copilot oxygen and externally massaged his heart as the swift jet raced the most part will be for employees and their families.

If the program is successful, it is anticipated further efforts will be made next year to expand the program.

Many of the mills have cooperated through advertising messages in newspapers, radio and television to make the people of Wisconsin aware of the major role paper plays in their lives and in the economy.

In reply, pro-Nasser elements staged a series of demonstrations and riots.

Perform Emergency Surgery On Stricken Pilot in Flight

Lose in Dramatic Race With Death

NEW YORK (AP) — In a speed-aid Yvonne Stapfer, 32, the chief ing jet airliner high over the Atlantic, a leading Stockholm surgeon and a stewardess fought a desperate, losing battle Saturday to save a stricken copilot's life.

With blankets shielding the scene from first-class passengers, and using a knife from the plane's "galley," the pair performed an emergency operation.

Then, assisted by other crewmen, they gave the copilot oxygen and externally massaged his heart as the swift jet raced the clock.

Most of the 87 passengers weren't fully aware of the drama in flight, the stewardess said.

Still Breathing

Geraldo Segala, 29, the stricken second officer of Varig Airlines Flight 854 from Buenos Aires to New York, still was breathing, but unconscious, when taken from the plane at Idlewild Airport. He died before reaching a hospital.

Determination of the cause of death awaited an autopsy.

No Summer Recess Seen For Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Saturday he does not believe any summer recess will be possible for Congress this year.

Mansfield said in an interview "it's too late to do anything about it now" but added he is hopeful this Congress will set up a new system to make possible such recesses, starting in 1965.

However, a senator who has been working on the problem but asked that his name not be used told a reporter "I think we're going to come around to the idea of a recess this summer."

He reasoned that the leaders are reluctant to make any firm commitment now because they do not want to concede that the 1963 session will run into the fall.

Younger members of Congress who have children—and wives of these members—have been conducting a drive for years for recesses which would permit summer vacations with their families.

This has gathered force as sessions have lengthened. In 1962, even though it was an election year, the session did not end until Oct. 13.

At the start of the 1963 session, leaders named a committee to study various recess plans.

Ideas for a long holiday were shunted aside, but the group did propose that a two-week recess be taken this summer in August immediately preceding Labor Day.

Mrs. Betty Miller Departs Fiji for Isle of Australia

The Federal Aviation Agency in Honolulu reported she left Suva at 1:47 p.m. EST.

The 37-year-old Santa Monica, Calif., woman would be the first woman to make the trans-Pacific flight alone. She estimated the flying time for the final 1,400-mile leg at 12 hours, 25 minutes.

Mrs. Miller is delivering a twin-engine Piper Apache plane.

She left Oakland April 30 and became the first woman to fly solo the 2,200 miles from the mainland to Hawaii.

Milwaukee Boy Ninth Traffic Victim in State

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

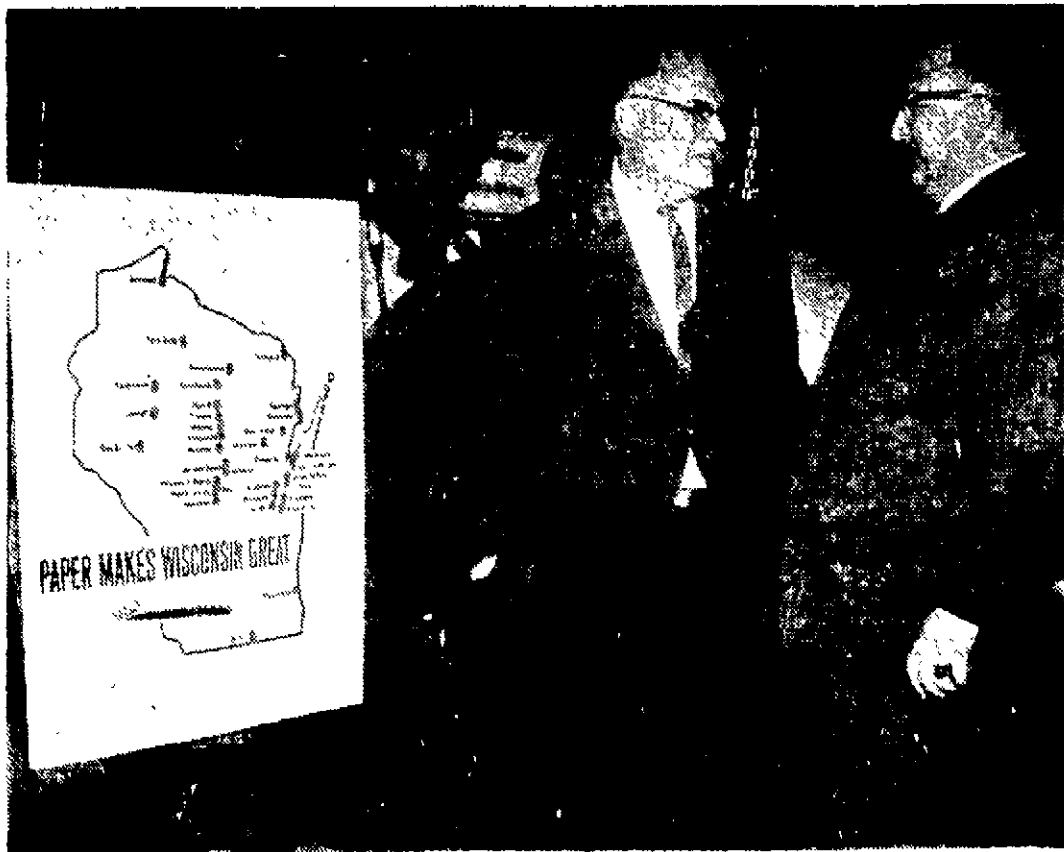

A young Milwaukee boy has become Wisconsin's ninth traffic fatality this weekend boosting the toll for the year to 234, eight fewer than on this date a year ago.

Eugene R. Weblor, 5, of Milwaukee, was struck and killed by a truck while he was riding his tricycle in front of his home Saturday. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Weblor. The driver, who was backing his vehicle at the time, said he didn't see the tot in the street.

Ralph Ortega, 36, of Milwaukee, was killed Saturday in a one-car accident on Interstate 94 in Racine County. A passenger in the car, Domingo Castro, Milwaukee, suffered injuries but was reported in good condition at a Racine hospital.

First Two Years

University Extension Centers in Area Help Educate 2,000 Students

BY MARY WALTER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

There are six University of Wisconsin Extension Centers in the northeastern and central Wisconsin area serving, this year, approximately 2,000 full time students who are able to get introductory courses usually taken at the freshman and sophomore level. In addition the centers serve their particular communities with adult education opportunities, lecture, concert and drama series of both a student and professional nature, and some special services unique to some of the institutions.

The first center to be built under the new legislation which authorized the establishment of centers where local money was available for construction is at Wausau. The building was completed three years ago and now enrolls almost 400 students. With a capacity of about 450, some remodeling is planned for the immediate future and an additional building as well.

The Wausau Center is under the direction of Dr. Henry Ahrensbrak. Although the majority of its students are from Marathon County and Wausau in particular it serves some six or seven counties in a smaller capacity and probably has a wider range than most of the centers. In part, this is due to the fact that student nurses at St. Mary's Hospital in Wausau take their academic work at the center.

The largest of the centers in this area is at Green Bay with an enrollment of more than 600 this year. The new building, located near East River, can accommodate 1,000 students, according to Director Theodore Savides. Any plans for building will have to be determined when and if it appears that the present structure is about to be outgrown or when and if a 4-year institution

State Sen. Gerald Lorge Sen. Lorge of Bear Creek Rises in Power in Legislature

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — In his seventh session, Sen. Gerald D. Lorge of Bear Creek has become one of the "work horses" of the legislature. The 41 year old representative of Outagamie and Waupaca counties this year is presiding over the deliberations of one of the major and busiest of the standing committees of the state senate.

The Senate Committee on Labor, Taxation, Insurance and Banking is responsible for the review of more bills than almost any other in the current legislature and in this session there has been produced a larger volume of controversial matter for the review of its members.

Testimonial

Lorge rose to the chairmanship of a major committee for the first time this year, as a testimonial from the senate majority leadership to his increasing skills as a legislator and his seniority. He has been a member of the legislature since 1951, when he started service in the assembly.

On the days when the committee has scheduled a dozen or more bills for public hearings and permits numerous witnesses on both sides of the many proposals to make their arguments fully, the Lorge committee sometimes works into the evening hours.

The committee is regarded as one of the strongest in the senate in the acceptance of its recommendations on measures. It contains also some of the leaders of the party caucuses. Sen. Robert P. Knowles of New Richmond, the majority Republican leader, is a member, as is Sen. Lynn Stalbaum of Racine, one of the chief spokesmen of the Democratic minority.

Lorge's rise in the councils of his party has renewed speculation about his future career in politics. Some reports have it that if Lt. Gov. Jack B. Olson runs for the Republican nomination for governor next year, as is likely, the Bear Creek lawyer may run for the nomination for lieutenant governor. Lorge was one of the candidates suggested for lieutenant governor endorsement at the 1962 convention of the Republican voluntary organization.

War Veterans Slate Meeting at Neenah

NEENAH — A meeting of World War I veterans, Neenah barracks 2318, will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Neenah recreation hall for the purpose of electing delegates to the state convention to be held in Milwaukee in July.

A spokesman for the group said all World War I veterans are invited to attend the meeting.

RENT A PIANO

Summer School

The Green Bay Center will offer an 8-week summer school this summer with credits in a number of courses equal to a semester of work.

The Fox Valley Center at Menasha has about 500 students this year but an addition which will be ready for use by next fall will about double the capacity, according to Director Verne Imhoff. Fox Valley is located on 20 acres of land with apparently unlimited building areas for any future development. When the center moved into its new quarters in 1960 the enrollment jumped from 90 to about 300 students.

Fox Valley has a planetarium which offers two showings per day to outside groups. A summer school is in the planning stage for 1964.

New Building

The enrollment at the Sheboygan Center is at present only 160 because of cramped facilities. However, a new building on the edge of the city will be ready for use by January of 1964 on a 72-acre site. Capacity will be approximately 600 students.

Smallest of the centers in this area is at Marinette where it shares the facilities of the vocational school with three public school elementary grades. However, the school includes a chemistry laboratory and a gymnasium as well as regular classrooms. There are 67 students at the Marinette Center this year, 40 of them from the city.

The Marinette Center added the sophomore year only last fall although it had been in existence since after World War II. There have been discussions in the area of the possibilities of a separate center but no concrete plans thus far.

New Center

The Manitowoc Extension Center was ready for occupancy only last fall and has had 252 students enrolled during the school year. This is expected to increase to at least 275 by September. As at most of the centers, the Manitowoc student population is overwhelmingly male with a ratio of about 4 to 1. The majority of students are from Manitowoc and Two Rivers.

The new building has a capacity of about 400 full time students and there are currently 29 course offerings. Nurses working toward a degree are enrolled at an evening course.

The university centers are under the direct control of the administration at Madison and faculty assignments are made there with the approval of the various directors. Several faculty members teach at several centers, making a circuit several days per week. Other faculty members are employed on a part time basis. While individual communities put up the funds for the housing of the centers, all other costs except maintenance are borne by the state.

Three Roles

Dr. Savides sees three major roles for the centers in Wisconsin. First, they are to offer freshmen and sophomores the courses they need to go on as juniors to other institutions. Secondly, they should serve a research purpose for the growing interest and ability of the members of the faculty to get state and national grants for such purposes. Third, they should have opportunities for adult education including courses for teachers, social workers, undergraduate and even graduate students, both credit and non-credit.

While most of the centers offer the basic freshman and sophomore courses, all the offerings are not the same but depend both upon the demand in a particular community and the availability of faculty. The Fox Valley Center for instance is expanding particularly in science with organic chemistry, physiology, anatomy and bacteriology planned for in the future.

Despite all the current publicity about another four year university in the state, the directors of centers in this area stress that they feel the 2-year institutions have a very needed purpose. Expressed by Dr. Savides they include the problem of separating the youngsters who are unable to do collegiate work from those who can or those who simply don't.

The larger centers expect to add about 20 per cent in new courses with an emphasis on music and art as well as the sciences and languages. A Ford Foundation urban study grant with Outagamie and Winnebago counties the designated areas for the study is being used by the Fox Valley Center in research projects in various disciplines.

Certainly with the trend toward regional colleges, there is no lack of interest in the university centers.

Companion Of Lipscomb Tells Story

Man Says Pair Was 'Shooting' Heroin Just Before He Died

BALTIMORE (AP)—A 25-year-old-drinking companion of Gene (Big Daddy) Lipscomb, hulking defensive tackle of the National Football League who died suddenly Friday, told police Saturday that he and Lipscomb were "shooting" heroin just before the Negro athlete died.

Timothy N. Black, in whose West Baltimore apartment Lipscomb's unconscious form was found at dawn Friday, has been charged with possession of narcotic paraphernalia and faces a preliminary hearing Sunday.

Maryland's chief medical examiner, Dr. Russell S. Fisher, said Friday that the "... presumption is that this man (Lipscomb) is dead as a result of an overdose of narcotics, and by that we mean heroin, possibly accidentally injected."

Autopsy Report

A complete autopsy report is not due until Tuesday, however. A homemade syringe was found near Lipscomb's unconscious form when an ambulance crew arrived to take him to Lutheran Hospital. He was pronounced dead on arrival.

Capt. Joseph F. Carroll of the Baltimore police narcotics squad said Black told him that a third man entered the apartment while he and Big Daddy were shooting the heroin. Carroll said a search has been launched for the man whom Black said sold him and Lipscomb heroin.

Capt. Carroll said the sequence of events Friday night according to Black's statement ran something like this:

Black and Lipscomb, after spending the evening with two girls in Black's apartment, went out and bought a quantity of heroin on Pennsylvania Ave. in Baltimore's Negro district and returned with it to Black's apartment. Black said they bought what he termed a "512 deck," which Carroll said was about four grains of heroin.

They put the narcotic in a wine bottle cap, added water and held a match under the cap until the mixture boiled.

Lipscomb then borrowed Black's belt and tied it tightly around his upper arm. Using an eye dropper, Lipscomb filled the home-made syringe with the mixture and injected it into a vein in his arm.

Collapsed Immediately

Black said Big Daddy collapsed almost immediately, drooling from the mouth. When Black was unable to slap him back to consciousness, he put ice bags on his head and between his legs, hoping to revive him. It was at this point, Black said, that the third man came in.

Black said he and the third man discussed what to do with Big Daddy, and the third man suggested a salt and water mixture as being an effective antidote. Black said they injected this into Lipscomb, but it failed to help.

Black said he then gave himself a shot of heroin and called an ambulance.

Black said he had known Lipscomb for more than a year, but that the 290-pound, 6-foot-6 Pittsburgh Steeler tackle had been on heroin only for a few months.

Black told police Lipscomb had gone to the West Coast several months ago and was mainlining heroin when he came back. Mainlining is the injection of a narcotic directly into the blood stream.

Grid Veterans Win Illinois Drill Contest

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—Freshman halfbacks Sam Price and Ed Terrill led a veteran-dominated Blue team to a 28-20 victory Saturday in Illinois' intrasquad game, which ended spring football drills.

Terrill intercepted a pass and returned 65 yards for a touchdown which put the Blues in front to stay in the second quarter.

Price, having recovered from a knee injury, led the Blue ground attack along with veteran fullback Al Wheatland. Quarterback Mike Taliaferro had 7 completions for 112 yards and touchdown. Whites was fullback Jim Grabowski and halfback Dick Kee, each scoring a touchdown. Quarterback Fred Custardo completed seven passes and his alternate, Ron Acks, dashed 21 yards for a touchdown.

Demeter's 5 RBIs Offset Milwaukee Home Runs by Mathews, Aaron, Bolling

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Don Demeter's five runs batted in and Ryne Duren's relief pitching gave the Philadelphia Phillies an 8-5 win Saturday over Milwaukee, but the loss went to Hank Fischer, who was able to get only one man out.

Demeter's seventh inning double, his second of the game, brought in two of the Phils' five runs. The rally saw 11 men go to bat and wrap it up for Duren, who pitched four scoreless and hitless innings in relief of Art Mahaffey.

Bobby Wine and Don Hoak brought in the other Phil runs in the big seventh when the Phils came from a 5-3 deficit.

The Braves hit Mahaffey freely with Frank Bolling, Hank Aaron and Ed Mathews slugging home runs. For Aaron it was No. 11 this year. When Matthews followed Aaron's sixth inning blast with another, Duren came in.

Bob Shaw was knocked from the mound in the Phils' seventh but the loss went to Hank Fischer, who was able to get only one man out.

Demeter's second inning Texas League double brought in two Phil runs and a fifth inning single scored another.

Yankees Bomb McNally for 13-1 Triumph

MARIS, MANTLE Lead Attack With Home Runs

BALTIMORE (AP)—Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris paced a 19-hit New York attack Saturday as the Yankees ended a four-game losing streak by crushing the Baltimore Orioles 13-1.

The famed M&M sluggers, who haven't played together much this season because of injuries, hit homers and drove in three runs apiece.

Mantle scored a two-run double and Maris a run-producing single as the Yanks chased rookie Dave McNally during a seven-run fourth inning. Maris hit a two-run homer in the fifth and Mantle had a solo homer in the seventh.

Starters and substitutes alike joined in the Yankee hit parade. Clete Boyer collected two doubles and two singles. Joe Pepitone a double and two single, and winning pitcher Steve Hamilton drove two runs home with a triple.

Hamilton struck out 11 Orioles and permitted only three hits after the relieved Yankee starter Stan Williams in the first inning.

Baltimore scored in the first as Williams gave up three walks and one hit and uncorked a wild pitch.

Disappointing Passing Attack Running of Kurek and Hackbart Stands Out in Badger Scrimmage

MADISON (AP)—Fullback Ralph Kurek and halfback Jerry Hackbart combined their running power Saturday to lead the Badger White Team to a 19-17 victory over the Cardinals in an intrasquad football game that wound up spring drills for Big Ten Conference champion Wisconsin.

An 85 yard touchdown run by the Cardinals' Ron Smith in the waning moments of the game was all that made the score close. The White Team was ahead 19-9 before Smith got away.

The two teams slugged it out in a defensive battle for three quarters at quarterback, drove 69 yards for Kurek scoring on a two-yard keeper in the second quarter. Fronek kicked the extra point and the Whites had a 7-6 half-time lead.

The Cardinals regained the lead in the third quarter when end Ron Leafblad kicked a 22-yard field goal to make the count 9-7.

The White team, with Kurek and Hackbart alternating as ball carriers, drove 79 yards in the fourth quarter to take a 13-9 lead when Hackbart ran seven yards around left end for a touchdown. The kick was wide.

The next time the White team got the ball quarterback Greg Howey went up the middle 33 yards to the Cardinal three where he fumbled. The ball popped into the end zone and end Steve Olson fell on it for a touchdown to make the score 19-9.

On the ensuing kickoff, Smith took the ball on his own 15, dashed to the right sideline and went all the way for a touchdown. Quarterback Arnold Quaerna ran for the two-point conversion to make the final score 19-17.

Fronek, a sophomore from Antigo, drew praise from Bruhn for his work at quarterback. He ran 39 yards and completed five of 11 passes for 36 yards.

Ruined in Ninth Inning

ST. PAUL • MINNEAPOLIS

—Vic Power's single with none out in the ninth inning ended Ted Bowsfield's bid for a no-hitter but the Kansas City southpaw kept his poise and pitched the Athletics to a two-hit, 5-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

The Canadian-born pitcher also lost his shutout in the ninth but he had the satisfaction of snapping a five-game losing streak by the Athletics.

—Bob Allison got the Twins' second hit before Bowsfield could retire the side.

Bowsfield, purchased from the Los Angeles Angels last winter, had permitted only four batters to reach base, all on walks and needed only three more outs in the ninth to become the first pitcher to hurl a no-hitter in the majors this season.

Zoilo Versalles, the first batter to face him in the ninth, walked.

Bowsfield Loses No-Hit Bid

Power followed with a single to crash Bowsfield's dream.

The last no-hitter pitched in the majors was turned in by a Minnesota pitcher, Jack Krahek, and his victim was the Athletics, last Aug. 26.

The A's wrapped up the victory in the fifth inning when Jerry Lumpe crashed his first home run of the season with two on base.

Bowsfield drew a bases-loaded walk in the second and Gino Cimoli hit a sacrifice fly to give the A's a 2-0 lead.

Until the ninth, Bowsfield had walked four and struck out four in the chilly, 48-degree weather and hadn't allowed a runner past first base. The closest thing to a hit by the Twins was a looper by Lenny Green in the fourth inning that second baseman Lumpe raced back and speared in short right field.

The loser was rookie Jim Roland, who was charged with all five Kansas City runs. It was his first loss after two victories. Bowsfield, a 6-foot-1, 185-pounder, is now 2-4.

Parnelli Jones Sets Lap Mark At Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Parnelli Jones, who already owns the Indianapolis Motor Speedway qualifying record, drove a lap at 152.027 miles an hour Saturday, the fastest ever recorded at the track.

Jones drove the same Azarian Special in which he took the pole for the 500-mile Memorial Day race last year at 150.729 m.p.h. He was the first man to pass 150 here.

Jones added fuel to a speedway feud by turning in the record lap on 15-inch tires. Veteran speedway drivers and car owners have protested use of the smaller tires by foreign entries.

Jones said he had proved his point "that you can run quicker, like the Lotus-Fords have done, on 2 1/2-inch tires."

Most conventional speedway roadsters use tires 16 inches in diameter, with narrower tread.

Nicholson's Homer Gives White Sox Win

Chicago Increases League Lead to Two Full Games

BY JOE MOOSMIL, Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—Dave Nicholson's three-run, fourth-inning homer in the face of a stiff wind powered the rampaging Chicago White Sox to a 4-2 victory over the Los Angeles Angels Saturday. The triumph was the sixth straight for the Sox and boosted their American League lead to two games over the Baltimore Orioles, who lost to New York, 13-1.

Nicholson's homer, his seventh of the year, came off starter Bob Belinsky, who stumbled to his fifth defeat against one victory.

Belinsky, who was 5-0 on May 11 last year, was in trouble from

UW '9' Loses First Tilt, 2-1, Second Game, 4-2

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Purdue pitched its way past Wisconsin to sweep a Big Ten baseball doubleheader 2-1 and 4-2 Saturday.

Southpaw Joe Caggiano held the Badgers to four hits in the opener, although he was tagged for a home run by Wisconsin's three-spot standout, Pat Richter. Purdue erased the 1-0 lead in the bottom of the seventh on a single, two Badger bobbles and two sacrifices.

Both Wisconsin runs in the nightcap were unearned as Larry Vanderwielen and Bob Purkhiser again yielded only four Badger hits.

Foxes Game With Cedar Rapids Is Postponed

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia. — The Fox Cities Foxes game with Cedar Rapids was postponed Saturday night because of cold and threatening weather.

By game-time the temperature had dipped into the 40s at Cedar Rapids and officials decided to postpone the tilt.

The Foxes return home today and will face the Decatur Commodores in a game at 8 p.m. tonight at Goodland Field.

Hank Aaron Says He's Not Thinking of 60 Home Runs

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Hank Aaron said Saturday night that he's off to the best over-all start in his 10-year major career with the Milwaukee Braves, particularly in the home run department, but he's not thinking about hitting 60.

The right-handed slugger cracked out No. 11 Saturday during the Braves' 8-5 loss to the Phillies.

Aaron, who is also among the National League leaders in batting (.333) and leads the NL in RBI with 25, was asked if he was going to try for 60 home runs.

"That's a mighty big question," was the reply. "I'm not thinking about 60. I'm aiming to do better than last year (in homers) and win a few games. If I hit 46 or 47 (he hit 45 last year) I will be doing okay."

Aaron recalled that he had a miserable start in spring training, hitting about only .220.

"When the season started everything just came around," he said. "I'm using the same stance, same bat."

Asked about the team's poor showing as of late Aaron said "our ball club is predominantly young."

"This is just about the first full year for many players," he explained. "You've got to allow for mistakes which cost games. When they get confidence this club is going to jell."

Bob Mueller Hurls No-Hitter for Vikes

St. Olaf Cops Second Game, 9-1

Pitching no-hit, no-run ball, Bob Mueller hurled Lawrence College to a 5-0 win over St. Olaf of Northfield, Minn. in the first game of a twin bill at Goodland Field Saturday afternoon.

However, the Minnesota visitors stopped the Vikings short and topped them, 9-1, in the second Midwest Conference match.

In the first tilt, Mueller allowed only three St. Olaf runners to reach base, on two walks and an error by second baseman Bill Oram-Smith. Mueller fanned three.

Lawrence scored its first run in the initial frame, when first baseman Bill Robinson tripled and scored on a passed ball.

The Vikes tallied two more runs in the third, when Robinson singled and advanced to third on a single by catcher Paul Clark. A hit by centerfielder Bob Dude scored Clark and Robinson.

Two more Lawrence runners crossed the plate in the fifth, when Dude singled, Clark reached first on a fielder's choice, went to third on a single by Tom Knabe and scored, along with Knabe, on two consecutive walks.

Bill Prange started on the mound for the Vikes in the second game. He was relieved in the sixth by Don Biere, who went out for Mueller in the seventh.

Prange allowed seven runs, and Biere allowed two. The trio gave up 12 hits in all.

The Vikings scored their only run when Robinson singled, went to third on a single and stole home.

St. Olaf crossed the plate three times in the fourth, once in the fifth and four times in the sixth.

NFL Coaches, Rozelle Discuss Rule Changes

DALLAS (AP)—The 14 coaches, which in this case was the end of the National Football League.

headed by Commissioner Pete Rozelle come to Dallas Tuesday to talk about the officiating and rules changes instigated by the Dallas Cowboys.

The coaches can do nothing about it but they can make recommendations.

One rule under discussion led to a 30-28 Cowboys' loss to Pittsburgh last fall. An apparent 99-yard touchdown pass from Eddie LeBaron to Frank Clarke was called back and the Steelers were awarded a safety when Dallas guard Andy Cvercko was ruled to have held the late Big Daddy Lipscomb in the end zone.

The rule assessed the penalty from the spot of the infraction.

Discourages Team

"This discourages a team from playing the kind of game that made pro football so popular," says Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

The coaches will decide whether to recommend to the club owners that the automatic safety call be eliminated and that the offensive team to be penalized half the distance to the goal.

The other rule has to do with the "Lantry shift" in which Dallas linemen are set in position twice (a double shift) and backs may or may not change positions while the linemen are going into their second position stance.

NFL rules say a double shift inside the opponents' 20-yard line is prohibited "unless this double shift has occurred previously at least three times in the same period."

The cowboys were penalized for this in their 19-10 loss to Cleveland in Cleveland.

A report on officiating proposed standardization of game films and reels and film exchanges player time charts, and pre-game warm-up standardization also are on the agenda.

Massachusetts Recognizes Tiger as Champ

BOSTON (AP)—The Massachusetts State Boxing Commission announced Saturday night recognition of Dick Tiger as world middleweight champion, making it unanimous for the slugging Nigerian.

Commission Chairman Herman Greenberg announced the vote of the three-man body was unanimous. Previously Massachusetts had been the lone state which did not rate Tiger the king of the 160 pounders.

The state stood behind Paul Pender until the former Brookline Mass. fireman announced his retirement from the ring last Tuesday.

'Retreats' Being Established

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The hunger of city-bound residents for woodland retreats in upper Wisconsin has brought on a land boom in some of the forested counties of the Wisconsin north, a consensus of the number of animals in that area has dropped to a new low. In the remainder of the state, only the northeast reported adequate water conditions. At mid-winter, critical or borderline conditions were found on from 36 to 46 per cent of the areas surveyed in the southern half of the state.

Muskrat populations characteristically vary with the amount of precipitation. Full potholes and marshes last spring and summer had resulted in increases in parts of the state as high as 500 per cent over the previous five-year average. These gains were largely wiped out during the past winter and many thousands of potential fur animals wasted.

The waste problem is compounded by lack of interest among trappers because of low pelt prices.

"The trend toward greater recreational use of the land increases yearly, and there is a steady demand on the part of urban residents for rural lands," echoed the report for Oconto county.

The Door county summary noted that in some sections of that peninsula recreational zone poor farms are being excessively valued, in local opinion, because of the demand for them by non-residents, as against operating farms of good soil and equipment.

Brings Problems
While the trend is likely to aid the local tax base of the upper Wisconsin counties, it is also bringing with it some problems.

The fieldmen reported an increasing tendency for city buyers of forested acreage to dredge or dam lakes and streams, sometimes with harmful effects upon wildlife, and the Marinette county summary of problems committed critically about the excessive heavy use of some camping areas that have taken on what was called a "carnival" atmosphere.

Neenah Winners

Other Neenah winners were Hollis Bliss, 100; Bob Walker, 440; Tom Farin, 880; Jim Hammill, mile; Bill Dixon, shot put; and the medley and 880 yard relay teams.

The other four firsts went to Neil Stachowicz, Menasha, discus; Tony Frechette, Shawano, 220; Tom Rath, Two Rivers, high jump; and Jim Langner, New London, pole vault.

The Rockets also picked up four seconds and five thirds and their worst effort in any event was a fourth in the high jump.

Bliss won the 100 in 10.5 but was edged by Frechette in the 220. The latter copped in 23.6. Walker clipped the 440 in 53.2 and Farin repeated as half mile champion with a 3:02.6. Bob Roberts of the hosts won his heat and finished second in the final placings.

Joey Jay Puts End to Mets' Victory Chain

Hurls Cincinnati To 4-2 Triumph Over New Yorkers

NEW YORK (AP)—Joey Jay, who hadn't won a game all season, snapped the New York Mets' five-game winning streak Saturday, pitching the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-2 victory.

The victory boosted Cincinnati into sixth place ahead of Milwaukee as the Mets dropped back into eighth place, percentage points behind the Braves.

The Reds were held to only six hits by loser Alvin Jackson but used four of them, together with two of Jackson's six bacs on balls to score all their runs.

Eddie Kasko homered and Leo Cardenas had a pair of run-scoring singles for the Reds. The other Cincinnati runs crossed the plate while the Mets were engaged in a run-down play.

Choo-Choo Coleman drove in both New York runs with a run-scoring single and his first home run of the season.

Gave 5 Hits

Jay allowed five hits, struck out five and walked four in registering his first victory of the season, with relief help from Jim Henry in the eighth. The big right-hander, a 20-game winner in each of the last two seasons, has lost six.

The Mets lagged him for a run in the second on a walk to Duke Snider and singles by Tim Lincecum and Coleman.

Cincinnati took the lead in the third, scoring twice on Kasko's home run, a walk, an error by shortstop Al Moran and Cardenas' single.

The Reds increased their lead to 4-1 in the top of the seventh. Kasko walked, advanced to third on Pete Rose's safe bunt and Frank Robinson's forcing ground-out and scored on Cardenas' second single.

Robinson also scored when Cardenas, trying to stretch the hit, was caught in a rundown between

Oshkosh High Wins Suspended Tilt, Then Splits With Zephyrs

Gene Patzner Hurls Five-Hitter In Opener, Indians Cop Nightcap

OSHKOSH—Menasha St. Mary dropped the completion of a suspended baseball game to Oshkosh and then split a twin bill with the Indians Saturday in Fox Valley League play.

Oshkosh scored a run in the bottom of the 11th inning to win the suspended game, 5-4. The Zephyrs won the opener of the doubleheader, 3-1, behind the five-hitter of Gene Patzner and then were bombed in the night cap, 17-6.

St. Marys now is 5 and 6 in the league play while the Indians Joe Blumsack saw it 98-95 for climbed to the .500 mark at 5-5, the 27-year-old Bronx bartender with the two wins. The Zephyrs will see action this afternoon with a single game at Stevens Point, Pa. starting at 1:30 p.m.

The partial contest was the completion of a game started April 20 and called because of darkness at the end of nine innings with the score tied 4-4.

The pitchers on the mound when the April 20 game was halted, Patzner and Chuck Paul, resumed with Paul getting the win. The winning run came with Pat Schrage leading off the 11th with a single. He then stole second and took third on a bad throw and scored on a perfect bunt by Greg Gauthier.

Patzner got revenge in the second contest, out-dueling Paul for the win. The Zephyrs scored one in the first and two in the third inning to sew up the contest.

Frenzied Fans
The Mets gave their frenzied 9,500 Polo Grounds supporters something to shout about in the seventh.

After Coleman homered to narrow the Reds' lead to 4-2, Jay issued a pass to Moran and served a single to pinch hitter Jim Hickman but Charlie Neal lined to deep center to end the threat. Henry came in from the bullpen after Jay walked Ed Kranepool with one out and retired five straight batters.

Jose Gonzalez Wins Close TV Decision

BOSTON (AP)—Jose Gonzalez, a flailing, wade-in fighter, scored a 10-round decision over Joe DePietro Saturday night at Boston Arena.

Referee Joe Zapuslas scored the rather dull bout a draw. Judge Joe Blumsack saw it 98-95 for the 27-year-old Bronx bartender and Judge Joe Amaral had it 97-96 for Gonzalez.

There were no knockdowns. Gonzalez, a 3-1 underdog and a surprisingly heavy 161½ pounds, suffered a slight cut under his left eye in the seventh round. It did not appear to bother him.

It gave Gonzalez, only conqueror of middleweight Joey Archer, a record of 26-7, DeNucci, 162½ and from Newton, Mass., is 40-5-2.

Gonzalez, not much of a puncher but forcing the fight all the time, was at his best in the middle rounds. He took the fourth, seventh and eighth. DeNucci never was able to solve Gonzalez' baffling, bouncing, swarming style.

NOTES and NOTIONS

Hornung Isn't Behind Bars or a Social Outcast

The initial impact of the Paul Hornung-Alex Karras suspensions is over, but post-mortems continue. For example, Vince Lombardi revealed that his first reaction to the Hornung suspension was to quit because he felt that he, as a coach, had failed somehow. Then, Commissioner Pete Rozelle indicated the type of reaction his office has been getting. Nationally, the mail has backed his decision by a decisive margin, Rozelle says. Only from Wisconsin, where considerable emotion is involved, has there been more critical than favorable mail. A reader has sent a good representation of the national minority viewpoint, as written in a column by Boston's John Gillooly. In part, the writer says: "He is not a fixer or a rigger, a shaver or a bagman and yet Paul Hornung callously has been cast into the dungeon, sentenced to a year of mental anguish and physical rust, and this I say is wrong. . . . Hornung's sin is venial, a misdemeanor, but he has been dealt with like a felon. . . . He forgot to remember the fine-print of his contract, that's about all. He never made a bet against his team. He always played his best for Green Bay. . . . He is not crooked, this Hornung. He is not a criminal. . . . But being from Louisville, possibly, he loves to gamble and he took a few flings and now look—the leprosy. The penalty, a year on the street, is much too drastic." Gillooly goes on to say that Rozelle has too much power, that Hornung and Karras should have been fined $2,000 like the five Lions but not suspended, that Hornung should sue the NFL for character assassination and that the AFL and Boston's Patriots, in particular, should welcome Hornung into their league.

I respect this writer's opinion, but as much as I've admired Hornung's play (and have cheered him personally at City stadium), I can't accept the view that Rozelle acted rashly or that Hornung and Karras have been rapped too severely. (I should hasten to add that I go along with the penalty only if it proves to be one season. But, if the indefinite suspension becomes longer than that—and there are no new violations—I certainly would oppose it.)

Let's look more closely at our Boston colleague's comments. It is quite clear that Hornung is not behind bars. Nor is he awaiting trial in a court of law. Nor is he a social outcast (as shown by a Boston reception the other night). But, he is paying for repeated violations of a league code. As a sovereign body, the NFL (through its commissioner) has the right to determine punishment for its members. Though the gambling clause in the contract may have been in fine print, it was raised to bold-face emphasis several times each season by coaches and NFL officials. The glamorization of athletes has set them as a group apart—but they must accept the responsibility that goes with this status. The anti-gambling rule wasn't pulled out of thin air. Bitter experience has shown that most sports and gambling (which is too often associated with unsavory characters) are not compatible.

With the very integrity of pro football at stake, could Rozelle afford to look the other way? Hornung's and Karras' infractions were the first clear-cut cases—with overwhelming evidence—of repeated violations of the league rule. Could Rozelle let them off with a fine as he did the five Lions who were first-time offenders? That would hardly be fair or effective. Hornung and Karras wouldn't miss $2,000 or $5,000 in fines. But, take a year off a pro grinder's comparatively short career and it really hurts. The ultimate danger of player betting must be kept in mind. Hornung and Karras didn't bet against their own teams, it's true. But, who's to say that if a player became a compulsive gambler and lost heavily that some day he might not bet against his team and throw a game? Also—this talk about Rozelle's having too much power is nonsense. Boxing is without a "czar"—and look at the shape that sport's in.

Though Hornung disregarded Lombardi's warnings about gambling, the Packer chief is not bitter toward Paul—at least publicly. Vince, we understand, went out of his way during the recent Packer stockholders meeting to laud Hornung. Lombardi said the Packers will miss Hornung as much psychologically as on the field. He called Paul "A 100 per cent player, a winner and a leader. He did something for the whole team whether he was in there or on the bench."

The Dairyland Baseball League's "Kelly" Weller and other officials are receiving many deserved congratulations for their alertness and foresight in dropping the "1-second stop" clause from the balk rule. While the National League was "balking," its way to ridicule and boredom with over-strict adherence to the 1-second rule, the Dairylanders acted "big league" by liberalizing the rule without condoning the "quick" pitch. Commissioner Ford Frick fell asleep at the switch and was far too slow in getting the leagues to agree on a more sensible interpretation of the rule. It underscored the need for unifying major league umpiring and putting all arbiters under common control.

Ted Bleier, former Appleton High School star who visited his mother here recently, said he is delighted that his nephew, "Rocky," is doing so well on Xavier's athletic teams. Miami's Bleier is supervisor of health and physical education in the Dade County (Fla.) public school system, the seventh largest in the U.S. Ted played fullback for AHS in 1924 when it was headquartered in Morgan School.

The untimely death of Bob Biesmann took an "old pro" away from the Fox Cities Foxes' management. The personable assistant secretary of the club handled some of the affiliation negotiations during the organizational phase and continued to give freely of his time and valuable advice every season since.

Split in Twin Bill With Beloit Gives Redmen Crown

RIPON — Ripon College wrapped up its second straight crown in the Midwest Conference Northern Division baseball race Saturday by splitting a doubleheader with Beloit.

The Redmen came back to win the second game, 4-0 after dropping the opener 3-1.

Mike Judy tried the iron-man stunt for Beloit by starting the second game after hurling a brilliant 2-hitter in the opening Beloit victory.

Ripon finally got to Judy in the third inning of the second game, scoring four runs after two were out. After a walk and a pair of singles which loaded the bases, Dave Worden came through with the key hit, a long double that scored all three runners. Worden scored later on another hit.

Jim LaRock was the winning hurler for Ripon as he limited Beloit to four hits while recording seven strikeouts and walking only one batter.

Augie Hecovar of Ripon was the losing pitcher in the first game. John Gieseck socked a homer for Beloit.

Pirates Snap Losing Streak, Defeat Cards

Bill Mazeroski Doubles With Bags Loaded; Law Wins

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Bill Mazeroski's bases-loaded double in the fifth inning sparked a three-run Pittsburgh outburst Saturday and helped the Pirates edge the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 behind the clutch pitching of Vernon Law and Bob Veale.

It broke a four - game losing streak for the Pirates.

St. Louis starter Ray Washburn, now 5-2, was coasting along with a perfect, no-hit game, retiring the first 12 men to face him when Donn Clendenen led off the fifth with a double. Bob Clemente and Smokey Burgess walked and Mazeroski smaked one into center.

Load Base Again

Bob Bailey reached first on an error to load the bases again and moments later Burgess scored the winning run on a double play grounder by Law.

Law, 1-1, scattered eight hits over the first 8-2-3 innings, but he was tagged for solo home runs by Bill White in the first and Stan Musial in the second.

Back-to-back singles by George Altman and Ken Boyer chased Law with two down in the eighth but Veale got Musial to fly out to end the threat. Elroy Face mopped up in the ninth.

Chateaugay Faces Day of Decision

Colt to Shoot for Second In Racing's Triple Crown

By GEORGE BOWEN
BALTIMORE (AP)—The second race in the world series for 3-year-old colts, the $150,000-added Preakness at Pimlico next Saturday, shapes up as a momentous day of decision for Chateaugay.

Will he be remembered faintly as time goes by as a flash in the pan after an upset in the 1963 Kentucky Derby? Or will he have a chance to become only the ninth colt since 1875 to sweep the Triple Crown classics?

The questions have been churning the turf scene since Chateaugay stormed down the stretch of Churchill Downs a week ago and copped the Derby.

In his wake were the undefeated Candy Spots and No Robbery and the highly regarded Never Bend. Chateaugay was only fifth betting choice in a field of nine.

Suprised Owner

The chestnut son of Swaps surprised even his owner, John W. Galbreath of Columbus, Ohio, and trainer Jimmy Conway. Both admitted they didn't think beforehand that Chateaugay was that good.

Harry P. Guggenheim, New York owner of Never Bend, Rex C. Ellsworth, California breeder of Candy Spots, and Jack Stein, the Los Angeles owner of On My Honor, demonstrated they felt the same way.

They shipped their colts without hesitation to Pimlico to tackle Chateaugay again in the 87th Preakness.

Thus, the main Derby cast will be on view in a return road engagement. Never Bend, Candy Spots and On My Honor finished in that order behind Chateaugay in the Kentucky premiere.

The quartet is expected to have the stage virtually to itself. No Robbery bucked his shins finishing fifth in the Derby and is in the wings for several weeks.

Out of the other four Derby trailers, Patrice Jacobs' sixth place Bonjour and J. J. Cherock's considered only lukewarm Preakness probabilities.

The Preakness is 1 3/16 miles, a sixteenth shorter than the Derby, but still a lot of distance for a colt short on competition.

Pimlico officials can count the noses of only three other possible entries. Maine Chance Farm's Get Around, second to Chateaugay in the Blue Grass Stakes April 25; R. F. Bensinger's In The Pocket, and Jacnot Stable's Country Squire.

If Chateaugay can tack the Preakness to his Derby laurels, he will be the 14th to do it. Only eight added the Belmont, Citation being the last in 1948.

Since then Calumet's Tim Tam and Jack Price's Carry Back were within grasp of the crown. Tim Tam finished second in the 1958 Belmont and Carry Back was seventh in 1961.

The owners of Never Bend and Candy Spots have historic hopes for recouping Derby setbacks. Most recently, Native Dancer finished second in the 1953 Derby and Nashua was runner-up in 1955, but both went on to take the next two legs and be voted best in their class.

Nashua's winning Preakness time of 1 minute, 54 and 3/5 seconds still is the Pimlico record.

Not Best Effort

Many experts thought that Candy Spots in particular didn't exhibit his best effort in the Derby.

Some felt that Candy Spots appeared to be struggling from lack of work in his first race in five weeks. They are figuring the Derby may be just the race Candy Spots needed for the Preakness.

Those who want to watch for the answers, in addition to the probable 30,000 at Pimlico, will find it on the CBS television network (4:30-5 p.m. EST).

Shawano '9' Edges Neenah In M-E Game

Indians Break Tie in Sixth For 4-3 Victory

NEENAH — Shawano broke a tie with a run in the top of the sixth inning to edge Neenah 4-3 in their Mid-Eastern Conference game here Saturday afternoon. Both teams now have 2-4 league records.

Ted Spurrier's single drove in the deciding marker. It followed a walk, an error and a fielder's choice. Neenah had runners on second and third with one out in the sixth and the tying run on third in the seventh but all three were stranded.

Wayne Darling went the distance for the Indians and allowed four hits. He walked four and struck out six. Loser Mike Casey also went the route, allowing seven hits. He had three walks and six strikeouts on his record.

Shawano scored three times in the second inning on a walk and hits by Dick Hartman, Tony Krysiak, Vaughn James and Gary Laehn. Krysiak stroked a double.

Neenah came up with two in the second on three walks and Joe Muench's double and added its final marker in the fifth on a hit by Casey, an error, a walk and Don Ferry's sacrifice fly.

KING-PIN capers

"Prep Pin Patter", the magazine which is the official publication for the American Junior Bowling Congress carried one of the funniest and most unusual stories of a bowling incident that I have read in a long time.

Here's how the story goes: A certified bowling instructor participating in the 1962 California State men's tournament brought the entire meet to a halt while officials tried to decide on how to rule on this incident.

It seems that when the instructor delivered his first ball of the third frame in the team event, for reasons still unknown, he was unable to release the ball properly. When he did, the ball went up, through the ceiling, made an arc in the attic, came back down through the ceiling and landed on the lane among various pieces of plaster and other debris, 12 to 15 feet ahead of the foul line. The ball rolled into the gutter, and stopped dead.

The final ruling by officials was that the ball was legally delivered and was counted as a gutter ball.

As a sidelight it might be mentioned that the bowler, in addition to his duties as an instructor, fits and drills balls at the establishment.

Art Guepe OVC Commissioner

Resigned in Fall As Football Coach At Vanderbilt

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Art Guepe, who resigned last fall as Vanderbilt University football coach, was picked Saturday as the first full-time commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference.

Guepe was chosen for a two-year term by the league's presidents at a meeting here. Nashville was selected as the site for the league's headquarters.

The commissioner's salary will be $10,000 a year plus expenses.

"I am pleased to have the opportunity to stay in athletics and to serve the fine schools in the OVC," Guepe said.

In addition to being chief administrative officer of the eight-school conference, Guepe will act as league secretary-treasurer and will appoint officials.

Members of the OVC are Tennessee Tech, Middle Tennessee State, Western Kentucky, Austin Peay State, Murray State, Morehead, Eastern Kentucky and East Tennessee State.

Wisconsin Ranks Third in Fish License Sales

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Interior Department said Saturday a total of 19,403,465 persons in 50 states purchased one or more sport fishing licenses during 1962. The permits cost $54,163,163.

In 1961 the total number of persons licensed was 19,394,177 and the cost of the permits was $52,851,244.

The totals were based on information furnished by 50 state fish and game departments to provide a basis for distributing federal aid funds for fish - restoration projects.

California reported the largest number of paid fishing license holders with 1,485,809 last year. The permits cost the holders $66,247,472.

Minnesota was second in number of license holders at 1,287,947 but was fifth in their cost at $2,494,789. Wisconsin was third in number at 1,060,000 but second in cost at $3,620,729. No other state had as many as a million paid license holders.

Pat Gillick Joins Elmira Team; Bownens Hits Well for Rochester

BY RALPH MUELER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The current 22 players with the Fox Cities Foxes are part of a Baltimore Oriole organization that includes a total of 149 active players on seven clubs, including the parent Baltimore club.

Former Foxes' right fielder Dan Markowski recently belted a triple and home run while playing center field for Fresno in the California League. The output came against the Orioles' Stockton farm club but was all in vain. Stockton won, 12-5.

Johnny Papa hurled successive 3-hit shutouts for Elmira in the Eastern League earlier this month. One of the whitewash jobs came against Springfield and one of the three blows came off the bat of Springfield catcher Dennis Sommers, of Hortonsville.

Steve Cosgrove has a 2-0 record for Elmira but still seems to be suffering from lack of control. He has walked 13 and fanned 11 in 19 innings thus far.

A 1960 Fox Cities starting pitcher, Pat Gillick, was optioned to Mexico City last Monday but balked and has been sent to play for Earl Weaver at Elmira. Weaver, who wasn't impressed with Gillick at the start of the 1960 season, now strongly speaks out in favor of the hurler's ability.

Sam Bownens is probably the most improved player in the Oriole farm system. The speedy outfielder was hitting over .400 at the start of the week for Rochester in the International League.

Submarine ball specialist Jim Lehigh is back with his old manager Cal Ripken at Aberdeen. Lehigh didn't have much of a chance to show what he could do this spring as he was troubled with a sore arm.

Other former Foxes now with Aberdeen are infielder Bobby Adams, shortstop Bob Litchfield, outfielders Rex Peters, John Scruggs, catcher Bill Shirah, and pitchers Ed Wall, Bill St. Peter and Dave Pickle.

Pickle is picking up where he left off with the Foxes last year when he had a 7-0 record, all in relief.

Dick Yench, a Foxes 1961 shortstop, has shown improved

Weyauwega — Doug Kolb fired a 4-hitter as Waupaca High School defeated Weyauwega, 6-1, in a Central Wisconsin Conference game here Saturday afternoon.

Kolb walked a batter and two errors gave Weyauwega its only run in the first inning. Kolb struck out three batters in the game and walked two.

Jack Woldt was the loser, fanning seven and walking three.

Kolb had a double to lead off the Waupaca sixth inning when three runs crossed the plate to tie the game. Only extra base blow for Weyauwega was a double by Don Wangelin in the seventh.

Fishing Loses Rank as Top Draw for Tourists

More Visitors to Wisconsin Express Interest in Forests, Camp Facilities

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Fishing has lost its rank as the chief lure of the tourist traveler to Wisconsin. Two recent studies of the state conservation department provide backing for the findings two years ago of a University of Wisconsin study that there are other and more appealing charms in this state that draw summertime visitors from other parts of the country.

The conservation department reported on the results of its polls of tourist visitors at the three new tourist information centers located on the Illinois and Minneapolis

Expert Offers Key Tips on Bait Casting

Wrist and Thumb Control Length, Accuracy of Cast

BY BOB CARY
Chicago Daily News Service

If you're a fisherman who doesn't bait cast, it's time to learn.

This type of angling developed in the Kentucky blue grass race-horse and bass fishing territory during the 1800's. The geared, moving-spool reel was first designed by American watchmakers looking for a simple method of hurling big baits a long distance on a short rod.

Modern casting methods are explained by Stu Pritchard, professional angler from the South Bend Tackle Co. Pritchard achieves pinpoint accuracy with a level wind reel and a medium action fiberglass rod.

Control of the cast is embodied in the thumb and wrist.

Pritchard aims the tip of the rod at the target point, a patch of bass-covering weeds next to a rock ledge. The thumb is firmly against the reel spool as the rod is brought back sharply.

As the rod reaches a vertical position, the wrist is "frozen," allowing the whip of the rod to bend back with the weight of the lure.

As the rod reacts forward, like a catapult, the wrist gives it a slight "push" and the thumb is raised slightly, releasing the reel spool.

The lure sails forward, control on distance maintained by the thumb. To prevent a tangling "backlash," caused when the speed of the reel overruns the line, a slight contact or "braking" effect is exerted on the reel at all times by the thumb.

Bait casting provides a very accurate, direct control of the lure and is especially deadly on game-fish when the fishing is done in heavy weeds or brush.

boundary lines, and of those prospective Wisconsin vacationers who replied to the state's travel promotion advertising during the last year.

The tourists who stopped at the information centers put fishing well down on the list of their primary interests and questions, and showed a comparatively high ratio of interest in camping and parks.

A larger sample of tastes and goals was provided by queries enclosed in the vacation packets distributed by the thousands by the state tourist promotion bureau last year.

Out of nearly 17,000 replies, representing a part of the season's mailings, the heaviest interest was shown in parks and forests, historical sites and camping, followed by fishing.

Hunting attracted the next largest number of visitors, followed by winter sports.

Forests, Parks
Seventy-five per cent of the respondents expressed an interest in forests and parks, against 56 per cent for fishing.

The documentation of the changing tourist appeal factors was one of the causes of the enactment of the $5,000,000 a year program of outdoor, recreational lands acquisition by the legislature two years ago.

Verstegen Hits 629 Series in KCA Pin League

Carl Hoehne fired a 230 game and Merlin "Spike" Verstegen cracked a 629 series to share individual honors on the final night of bowling for the KCA General Office League at the 41 Bowl.

Hoehne finished with a 581 series and Verstegen had a 229 game. Purchasing (631-3512) took the league championship with Research second, 3½ games off the pace.

Other honor scores included a 577 series by Jack Sheehy and a 555 by Ed Ruscher.

Need Is Mother Of Inventions

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Mrs. J. Shelton Wicker was driving a station wagon with her children in the back seat when one of the youngsters suddenly reached forward and put his hands around her eyes, saying "Guess who?"

After recovering from the shock of a near-accident she went home, took the side off a baby crib and tied it in the car to make a barrier between the front and back seats.

From this homemade gadget came the idea for making a "safety car fence." Now a Sanford furniture company and a local welder are turning out Mrs. Wicker's invention to be sold in auto accessory stores.

Husband, Wife Land Bass, Enter Master Angler Contest

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gradl Hook Qualifying Large, Smallmouth

A husband-wife fishing team from Appleton boated a couple of big bass this week and thus became eligible to compete for valuable merchandise prizes in the Post-Crescent's master angler fishing contest.

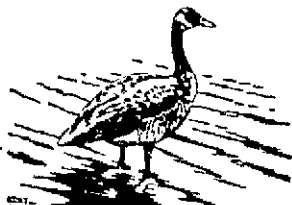

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gradl, 1402 N. Graceland Ave., each registered a bass in the newspaper-sponsored contest this week.

Al Gradl had a four-pound, six-ounce smallmouth which he caught near Winneconne. His wife, not to be outdone, boated a qualifying largemouth bass and now both are in the running for merchandise awards in separate divisions.

Only Large Fish
The contest is designed to consider only lunger-type fish in seven species divisions. To qualify, a fish must meet or surpass the minimum weight requirements listed for each species (see advertisement elsewhere on this page).

Prizes will be awarded for the three largest fish entered in these divisions: Northern pike, walleye pike, largemouth and smallmouth bass, brook, brown and rainbow trout.

The fish must be presented for registration at either the downtown Appleton Post-Crescent office or Post-Crescent offices at Oshkosh, New London, Waupaca, Chilton, Schmidt's Tavern in Fremont or the News Record office in Neenah.

Popple River Project Will Cost $53,000

MADISON — A new 1,900 acre public hunting and fishing grounds project in the far northeastern corner of the state has been outlined in preliminary form by the state conservation department.

The so-called Popple river project in Florence County would cost about $53,000, according to tentative figures offered to the state conservation commission and would include six miles of stream frontage for public fishing, hunting, recreation and habitat improvement in an area noted for its trout fishing opportunities.

The Popple River flows through a wilderness area, and its headwaters are within the Nicolet national forest.

The state agency said that most of the lands proposed to be acquired for public use are owned by a private corporation which had planned to build a dam across the stream, and then offered them to the state when it was refused a dam construction permit by the state public service commission. The owner is the Cico corporation of Oconomowoc.

Trout Opener Set In North Saturday

LAND O' LAKES — One of the great and growing problems of our times was touched upon by the Wisconsin Conservation Commission meeting here early in the week. Nothing much happened at the time, but something will, you can be on that.

The problem, of course, is pollution and the commissioners talked about only one phase of the entire situation. Commissioner James Smaby, LaCrosse, read a letter which he said pointed up a particular situation developing in the Mississippi River. There, he said, waste material is being poured into the old river from towns and cities all along the Minnesota border.

Smaby pegged the discussion on the incident earlier this year in which soybean oil somehow was dumped in the river and flowed downstream like a giant shadow, fouling the water and killing ducks.

—O—

Aside from fall, when the colors are brilliant, early spring must be one of the best seasons to enjoy the far north of Wisconsin. Spring has just touched this land of lakes and trees but the feeling of better things to come is more pronounced than in southern and central regions.

Here, now, spring is more of a feeling than anything else. You feel it in the soil and the warm breath of the air. The lakes appear blue and there's activity among people as well as animals.

—O—

Seasonal park use stickers for this year are now on sale and conservation department has urged early purchase to avoid last minute delays. The $2 seasonal windshield stamp is required for entry to most state park and forest recreation areas through Oct. 3. Automobiles without an annual sticker will be admitted by purchase of a 50-cent daily tag.

Total income from sticker sales in its first year during part of 1962 was $250,000. The money went for construction of wells and sanitary facilities, improvements in picnic areas and campgrounds and purchase of equipment.

Seasonal stickers may be purchased by sending a $2 check or money order payable to the Wisconsin Conservation Department, Parks Stickers, Wisconsin Conservation Department, Box 450, Madison, 1, Wis.

—O—

Old Joke Department — Two fellas were talking and one said "I was fishing Lake Poygan this spring when I got this terrific strike. I battled the fish for about 10 minutes and got it right along side of the boat when I saw I had a 14½-pound northern. But just then he twisted once, broke my line and got away."

"How," asked the other fella, "did you know how heavy that fish was if you didn't get him in the boat?"

"It was easy," the first man said. "I saw the scales." Okay, you find a funny story that's printable.

Supported by Resorts

Non-Resident Fish Fees Cut Would Hurt Budget

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The offering of five day non-resident fishing license for a fee of two dollars would cut the state's fishing license revenues by at least a third.

The conservation department has informed the legislature.

Elroy T. Baxter, finance chief of the department, protested a bill brought in by Assemblyman William Steiger of Oshkosh, who said some of his constituents believe it would be a boost for the weekend tourist business in his section of the state. The measure was supported by the Wisconsin Resort Association.

But the conservation administration said such a measure would under-cut its budget support severely. Baxter said there is now no sign that the tourist resents the regular five dollar non-resident fishing fee, as he pointed to the fact that Wisconsin non-resident sales have steadily increased and that the state now sells more fishing permits to visitors than any other state in the country.

Concession Made
He recalled also that the legislature some years ago made a concession to the short visit tourists by setting up a man and wife combination license effective for 15 days at a price of six dollars. More than 50,000 of such combination permits are now sold annually, as against about 270,000 regular non-resident licenses.

Legislators were told that resort spokesmen have discussed such a cut-rate fishing fee for years, but that they have been aware of the near-disastrous effects upon the department's budgeting.

At Central School on Tuesday Night

WINNECONNE — More than 300 projects in science, art, industrial arts, home economics and photography will be displayed at the Winneconne Central School Tuesday night at the school's first project exhibit.

Judging will be from 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesday and an open house will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Refreshments will be served by the home economics students. The exhibits will be located in the school lobby, gymnasium and cafeteria, according to Prin. V. J. Wadleigh.

Science Judges

Judging the science fair portion, for which more than 200 exhibits are expected, will be Dr. D. H. McDonald, Dr. Manfred Effenhauser, Leonard Rice and Norbert O'Connor, all of Winneconne. The art exhibits will be judged by Raymond V. Hudson of Neenah and Joseph Vogt of Oshkosh, commercial artists.

There will be no judging of the industrial arts exhibits which were done as class projects and graded accordingly. Judges have not been announced for the home economics exhibits which were done by the girls outside of class.

The ribbon awards and certificates are being provided by the Winneconne Kiwanis Club.

Entries Vary

Eleven senior and junior physics students will have entries which include transistor and tube amplifiers, solar mirrors, photo-electric relays, effects of different colored lights on plant growth, different types of lenses and pictures of the moon taken by telescope.

An estimated 150 entries will be received from the biology and general science classes while junior high students are entering about 50 exhibits in the science field.

During the evening Melvin Dobbe and Michael Hofberger will demonstrate the Schatz method of milk testing and Robert Schmoker and David Ruedinger will demonstrate the Holte-Truog method of soil testing.

Indian Spokesmen Seek Free Hunting, Fish Licenses for Tribe

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Leaders and spokesmen for the Menominee Indians of Menominee County returned to the state legislative arena this week on be-two years ago. The state conservation department insists that the Indians must buy fishing licenses and obey other fish and game laws, and a test case is now pending in the supreme court.

half of special legislative objectives of the former Indian tribesmen.

They asked legislators to support a bill that will insure for George Kenote, of Menominee Enterprises, Inc., a member of the tribe; Judge William Moshier of Milwaukee, a member of the board of trustees of the Menominee Enterprises, Inc.; William F. Trinke of Lake Geneva, a corporation trustee and former state senator who led the work which created new Menominee County in 1859; Agens Dick of Keshena and Lloyd Andrews of Shawano, long-time counsel for the Indians.

Kenote Trinke

enrolled Menominee Indians the right they enjoyed to hunt, fish and trap on Menominee Indian lands before the termination of their federal reservation status.

Ann Landers Chairman of TB Seal Drive

Ann Landers, whose advice column appears in the Post-Crescent, has been named to help solve a major world wide problem as honorary national chairman of the 1963 Christmas Seal campaign of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, wife of the President of the United States, was honorary national chairman of the 1962 Christmas Seal drive.

Announcement of the appointment of Ann Landers, who is the nation's leading human relations columnist (and whose column is published in 537 newspapers) was made at the association's annual meeting at Denver, Colo.

In accepting the appointment, Miss Landers said, "Most people view tuberculosis as a medical problem, a community problem, or a fund raising problem. As my mail testifies, it also is a creator of devastating mental, moral, emotional and marital problems."

Health Problem

Citing problems created by family separation, hardship and death resulting from tuberculosis, Miss Landers pointed out that tuberculosis costs this country $700 million every year. "The dedicated efforts of the National Tuberculosis Association, doctors, and community and social agencies have given us the means to control this disease," Miss Landers said.

"Yet the battle shows no signs of slowing, and tuberculosis remains the No. 1 health problem in the world today — the only major communicable disease problem in the U.S."

"What still remain to be conquered are ignorance and apathy," Miss Landers concluded. "This is a year-round job."

An Appleton family of modest means decided to have a fish supper out Friday evening.

A week before payday, the over-head had to be cut so the mother made desert to be had when returning home.

The family's secret leaked out when the port waitress came to the table when the meal was finished and asked "What'll it be for desert?" The youngest family member: "Nothing, we have a lemon pie at home."

Communion Made by 8 Children

Eight pupils in the special religion class for mentally retarded and handicapped children at Sacred Heart Church made their first communion today and were honored with their classmates at a farewell breakfast after the mass.

The class was started last fall for children in the Fox Cities area, and now has 24 pupils. It will be resumed next fall. Mrs. Leonard Dale is in charge.

Parents of the first communicants sat behind their children in church. Each child and his teacher went up to the communion rail together, and the parents stood behind them as they received communion.

The 10 teachers in the class — two Appleton High School students, five Xavier High School students, and three lay persons — were honored at the breakfast. About 125 persons attended, including relatives and friends of the communicants and other members of the class.

Also honored at the breakfast were the high school girls who teach in the religion program for grade school children on Monday evenings.

Each youngster in the special religion class received a miniature May altar and a mum plant at the farewell breakfast.

4 Programs Planned

NEENAH — The Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Izler Solomon conducting, will play Nov. 14, at Menasha High School auditorium. The program is sponsored by the Neenah-Menasha Community Concerts.

This is the first firm date and scheduling of talent for the four concerts planned by the group in its second year. Plans are now being made for a concert this year by the Tucson, Arizona Boys Chorus.

"Last year's concert series was highly successful," reported President Howard Angermeyer. "At our last concert members indicated an enthusiastic interest in continuing the series this year, and the variety of talent they expressed a liking for included just about everything — from jazz to symphony. It is the wish of the board members to choose our artists this year on the basis of the most popular appeal and the money we will have available."

Kickoff Dinner
The "kickoff" dinner marking the week in which Community Concert tickets will be sold will be held at 6:30 p.m., Monday, at the Valley Inn, Neenah. Don Witham, community concert rep-

Human Interest News Attracts Most Women

They Care Less About World, Political Events, Advertising Executive Claims

MADISON (AP)—A woman who reads newspapers is far more interested in human interest stories than in problems of state, according to a leading advertising and marketing executive.

Pierre Martineau, director of research and marketing for the Chicago Tribune, advised news-men attending the University of Wisconsin journalism institutes today to find out what readers want in a newspaper rather than assume they know the answer.

"The ordinary woman just couldn't care less for world news, political news, and this serious hard news which comprise 80 per cent of the news content of the average paper," he said.

"She is far more interested in the outcome of the Elizabeth Taylor mess than she is in whether Britain is ever admitted to the Common Market," Martineau said.

"She looks upon the paper as an enormous reservoir of highly-useful information—beauty articles, food preparation, child care. This is pragmatic, concrete, intensely meaningful, and she never feels any paper carries enough of it."

Martineau also took a swipe at newspaper sport pages.

They still concentrate on "the same old diet of professional baseball, a dying sport, as is boxing," he said, and "there is no awareness of the phenomenal growth of participation sports in America."

A feature of a banquet tonight will be presentation of citations for distinguished service in journalism. Jacob Friedrick of Milwaukee, president of the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents, will make the awards.

Sponsors of the Journalism institutes, in addition to the university, include the Wisconsin Daily Newspaper League and the Inland Daily Press Association.

Four AHS Girls May Attend Boys' State

Four Appleton High School girls may win the envy of their feminine classmates by being chosen to attend Badger Boys' State in June.

The girls won't go as official delegates. They've been recommended by AHS principal Herbert H. Helble as candidates for typists at Boys' State.

The girls, all juniors, are Mary Gauerke, Margaret Griswald, Mary Mathews and Mary Beth Thomas.

The typists are selected by American Legion officials who are in charge of Boys' State. Those chosen will be notified during the next two weeks. Boys' State is held at Ripon College.

4 Pay $100 Fines For Brawl Friday At Waupaca Bar

WAUPACA — Four men, three from Wausau and one from King, each were fined $100 Saturday morning by Municipal Justice George Whalen after they were arrested for brawling Friday night at the Uptown Alleys and Bar.

Jack R. Bruehling, 3, Wausau, was cut on the head with a broken glass wielded by Gerald C. Geiger, 45, King, police said.

Bruehling was taken to Waupaca

Hospital, where 16 stitches were required to close the wound in his head. Also fined were Virgil A. Laffin, 24, and Calvin V. Van Fleet, 34, both of Wausau. All four spent the remainder of the night in jail.

City Policeman Don Fabricius said Van Fleet attempted to block the doorway when police were called to the tavern. He had to be subdued, Fabricius said. The fight started after an exchange of words between Geiger and Laffin, he said.

The three Wausau men are employed at Waupaca on the re-facing of the courthouse.

Canadian Missiles May be Armed With Warheads

President, Prime Minister Reach Accord in Talks at Hyannis Port; One of Friction Points Erased

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—President Kennedy and Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson reached an understanding Saturday that a large measure of agreement had been reached in the day which a high U.S. official said might result in nuclear warheads in Canadian missiles before the end of the year.

The agreement was a high spot of the two days of friendly and informal talks at the President's summer home here, and it was expected to erase one of the friction points between the two countries.

North Africa Still French

Arabization Fails To Switch People's Old Loyalties

BY ANDREW BOROWIEC

TUNIS (AP)—The French language remains France's strongest ally in North Africa—a lasting link with Western civilization.

Despite periodic appeals for "Arabization," statesmen, scholars and politicians in Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco prefer to study and work in French.

In mountain villages of the Algerian Djurdjura, in the sun-drenched oases of the Tunisian south, in Morocco's teeming cities, a new generation of children is soaking up French civilization.

There are 15,000 French teachers in Algeria, 9,000 in Morocco and 2,400 in Tunisia—all making sure that the French spirit is here to stay.

Custom Made

The textbooks are somewhat tailored to North Africa. Ali and Zohra replace Jean and Mathilde in second-grade texts and minarets replace church steeples in drawings. But the approach and the method are largely those taught to the children in Alsace or Normandy.

From Tunis in the east to Casablanca in the west, the intellectual elite of North Africa prefer French-language newspapers and periodicals.

Two French metropolitan dailies and one weekly print special, North African editions. They are eagerly bought up. Crowds besiege theaters when visiting troupes from France arrive with Paris hits of two years before.

Birmingham Blow To Prestige of U. S.

Africans Show Understanding Of Problems Kennedy Faces

BY PETER LISAGOR

Chicago Daily News Service

WASHINGTON—President Kennedy emphasized a painfully obvious truth this week when he said the racial strife in Birmingham, Ala., was damaging the reputation of the United States.

Communist propagandists have cynically exploited every racial incident, large and small, as examples of American bigotry, hypocrisy, decadence, etc. Even friends across the world have been dismayed by the pictures of Negro children being hauled off to jail and police dogs snapping at Negro demonstrators.

No American can take much comfort from the fact that not everyone in the world believes that Birmingham is an accurate mirror of race relations in this country. The fact is that in Africa, surprisingly — and in Ghana, of all places — some effort is being made to analyze and understand, not merely to demagogue the episode in Birmingham.

African Comment

A radio commentator in Accra, in an English-language broadcast throughout Black Africa, this week called Birmingham "a major testing ground for their (Negroes) philosophy of passive resistance and nonviolence. If they can break down racial barriers by nonviolent methods in Birmingham, they believe that non-violence will be effective anywhere in the United States."

The Voice of Ghana spoke of the relations between the Kennedy administration and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the Negro minister, during the 1960 presidential campaign and of the telephone call Mr. Kennedy made on behalf of King, who was jailed in Georgia. The voice said that political observers credited this with electing Mr. Kennedy.

"Whether or not this is a correct analysis of the election returns, it is certainly true that Dr. King is one of the few black leaders in the White House," the Ghana analyst with direct access to the said.

"But recently," he went on, "relations have been strained between the Kennedy administration and leaders of the nonviolent movement. This was bound to happen because both are being subjected to quite different pressures."

Tough Job for Kennedy

"On the one hand, Mr. Kennedy is embarrassed by every demonstration, every outbreak of racial violence. Last year it required an entire battalion of army troops to escort one black man into a university which the law said he had a right to attend."

The commentator questioned whether Mr. Kennedy could "claim to be the leader of the so-called free world when anyone can see that 20,000,000 of his own citizens are not free."

He acknowledged that "an important aspect of Mr. Kennedy's policy requires the maintenance of good relations with Africans and Asians. Clearly, for this purpose Mr. Kennedy needs racial harmony. And this is the course he and his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, have been urging on black leaders like Dr. King."

Pressure on Negro Leaders

"The view of the administration is that the civil rights battle should be fought in the courts and in the election booths."

The pressures on King are different, the Ghana analyst stated. "The present mood of America's black community is not to become entangled with legalism but to make a frontal assault on every vestige of white supremacy. Leaders who cannot keep up are simply being cast aside. So the people are putting pressure on their leaders, who in turn must keep the pressure on the President."

The solution to America's racial problem, the speaker concluded, is for President Kennedy to use all the federal power at his disposal, including the power to stop federal spending in any state violating the Constitution. "This does not necessarily mean the use of armed troops," he said.

Delivered by a man in an African state where civil liberties have been notoriously denied and ignored, it is a remarkable commentary. With a change in emphasis here and there, a variation in language, the broadcast could have been written by a liberal white American critic.

Winter Is Back

Northeast Buried by Nine-Inch Snow Storm

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winter made a blustery, record-breaking return to the Northeast Saturday, dumping up to nine inches of snow and driving temperatures well below the freezing mark.

Residents of northern New England and New York state had to put away their lawn mowers and drag out the snow shovels again to dig away accumulations of as much as seven inches.

Just across the border in southern Quebec the freakish mid-May storm left 9.1 inches of new snow a record for so late in the year.

The Canadian Weather Bureau said the greatest previous fall in the area in May was less than 1 1/2 inches.

Late Snowfall

The heavy late snowfall was not unprecedented in New England, however. And strangely enough, the last major May snowstorm in the area fell just 18 years ago, May 10, 11 and 12, 1945. That one was even more severe, bringing up to a foot of snow to some sections.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Portland, Maine, said cold air from Canada had intensified the Northeast storm and provided some necessary ingredients to produce the unseasonable snow.

The chilly air also drove temperatures below the freezing mark in many northern sections of the country. The mercury plunged to 23 above zero in Duluth, Minn.; 24 in Pellston, Mich.; 30 in Greenville, Maine; and 31 in Green Bay, Wis.

Snow Depth

The snow depth reports for Maine included seven inches in Rumford and Farmington, with lesser amounts in other communities.

A four-inch blanket of snow at Colby College forced the first postponement of the 64-year history of the Main Intercollegiate Track and Field Championships. Dozens of other athletic events were called off.

In northern New York snow ranged up to 5 inches at Lyon Mountain and 4 inches in Danmore.

Political Crisis

Overhaul Completed In Syria and Iraq

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Controlling revolutionary commands overhauled Saturday the governments of Syria and Iraq — two members of President Gamal Abdel Nasser's planned Arab Federation.

The two nations agreed to unite with Nasser's Egypt after successive revolutions in February and March. But a week-old Syrian political crisis threatened to upset the union.

A Baghdad announcement of the Iraqi shakeup gave no hint that the threat had deepened in that country. It said Iraq was going forward for Arab unity.

Week of Rioting

After a week of pro-Nasser rioting in Syria, the National Revolutionary Council accepted the resignation of Prime Minister Salah Bilal, a Ba'ath Socialist who took over in a bloodless coup March 8. The council then asked Dr. Sami Jundi to replace him and attempt to form a government. He has been a proponent of Arab unity.

The Syrian switch appeared aimed at solving the nation's political crisis but whether it would do so remained a question.

In Baghdad, the Cabinet of Brig. Ahmed Hassan Bakr resigned but President Abdel Salam Aref asked Bakr to form a new government, an Iraqi broadcast said.

The broadcast quoted Bakr as saying the Cabinet, formed after the fall of dictator Abdal Karim Kassem on Feb. 8, had felt its mission was accomplished with the signing April 17 of the Cairo agreement for a federation of Egypt, Syria and Iraq. The mission of the new government will be to apply the Cairo agreement, the radio said.

New Stage

The Iraqi revolutionary cabinet was made up of Ba'ath Socialists. In his resignation letter, Bakr said "Iraq is approaching an era ushering in the immediate rise of the U.A.R. (United Arab Republic) as well as the new stage of preparatory constructive work for the establishment of the tripartite federation. We feel this requires a new basis and a new government that can adapt itself to this new stage."

Says He Was Scared to Death

Army Private Undergoes 10-Hours Of Artillery Shelling by Mistake

BY DALE NELSON

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — "At first I thought about retribution to the guy who left me there, but mostly I was just scared to death."

With these words, Pvt. Daniel J. Arthur, 17, described Friday his feelings during ten hours in a target area where thousands of rounds of live ammunition were falling.

Arthur was left to guard a phony mine field as part of Exercise Coulee Crest, an Air Force Army maneuver. The exercise began May 5 and ends May 20 on a million acres of central Washington.

The Los Angeles soldier, part of the "defending" Blue forces, was to be captured by elements of the "invading" Red forces. His captors failed to show up.

Gen. Paul D. Adams, commander in chief of the U.S. Strike Command and head of the exercise, said Arthur was erroneously accounted for as being out of the area.

At 6:09 a.m. Thursday, the Blue artillery opened fire. Arthur was asleep in his pup tent.

"When I first woke up I thought it was jets breaking the sound barrier," he said. "Then I looked out my tent. At first I just sat there and watched the show and wondered what was going to happen. I wasn't too worried."

"Then the firing got closer and the artillery opened up. I thought I might be sitting on one of their targets."

"I took all my white clothes—long underwear, shirts, shorts, a towel and things of this nature—and spread them out. I also made a small fire of sagebrush to try to attract the attention of the jets, but they couldn't see me at all."

Bounces Off Hill

"One artillery shell bounced off a hill and landed 100 yards from me. Their kill radius is 50 yards."

Arthur, who is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 125 pounds, curled up into a ball to make as small a target as he could. He wore his metal helmet.

During intervals of the bombardment, he worked on a letter to his wife, Wanda, in Tacoma, Wash.

"It ain't so peaceful here any more," the letter started. "There are a bunch of jets tearing holy hell out of my hill."

A little later, he wrote: "The bombs and cannon didn't get me but now they've got the artillery after me. Boy, this could drive a guy nuts."

"Here it is about 3 o'clock I'm shaking something fierce. I wish they'd stop."

At 3:30 p.m., the artillery fire was suspended and tanks began rolling into the area.

Sees Men

"I could see men coming over a hill," Arthur said in an interview. A tank fired a round which hit 75 or 100 yards up the hill from me. I was hit by rocks and dirt. The small arms fire was something else—I could hear bullets whizzing past me."

Arthur stood up and yelled. Someone called out, "Cease fire!" and a jeep rumbled up the hill. "What in the world are you doing here?" asked an officer.

"Sir," said Arthur, "I'm guarding a mine field."

Gen. Adams praised Arthur as "a brave man and faithful to his orders." He ordered an investigation and said new safety procedures would be instituted.

Arthur was checked at a dispensary here and appeared fit, but was to be taken to Madigan Army Hospital at Ft. Lewis, Wash., where he is stationed, for a further checkup today.

After that, he said: "I want to get back for our own live firing next week."

Nancy Toppins moves along with a shoulder shrug step as she practices her routine for the program. Classes meet for a half hour each week, with only one kind of dancing taught at each session.

Mrs. Betty Nutting, one of the instructors on the staff of Mrs. Marie Mortell in the Recreation Department dance program, leads a trio of young hoofers through the motions of a dance. They are Lu Ann Horn, Julie Alexander and Mary Heegeman. Other teachers are Mrs. Joan Streck and Miss Sonje Johnson. All have been students of Mrs. Mortell and Mrs. Nutting and Mrs. Streck now have children of their own taking lessons.

Mary Beth Holtz, below, shows absolute concentration as she works at perfecting a 'Twist' step for the Saturday dance revue. While the children take their dancing seriously, they do it mainly for fun, and acquire poise and self confidence along the way.

Young Hoofers to Strut Their Stuff In 'Wonderful World of Dance' Saturday

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

"Step . . . shuffle . . . shuffle . . . step . . . watch the arms . . . that's it . . . now turn . . ."

Every week about 230 youngsters take part in the dancing program offered by the Recreation Department under the direction of Mrs. Marie Mortell. 'Youngsters' is not exactly an accurate word. Many of those who attend the half-hour lessons have graduated from high school, but they started to dance when they were children and the rhythm has become part of their lives.

'Dancing' is an accurate description of Mrs. Mortell's blue eyes when she talks about dancing. It is clear she loves it. From the time she was graduated from high school, she has taught youngsters the motions and timing of tap, toe, ballet, acrobatic, modern jazz, character and ballroom dancing, mixing her lesson well with the spice of enthusiasm and creativity. She operated her own school until 14 years ago when she was asked by E. W. Grover to take over the recreation program.

Took Troup Along

She made the move to a city-sponsored program with a full retinue — including her assistants . . . young women who began as little girls with tapping toes and graduated to the role of instructors. Mrs. Donald Streck — Joan — started lessons when she was eight years old. As she grew up she wanted to help and when she was first allowed to teach the younger children she was as nervous as any new instructor. The mother of three youngsters, Mrs. Streck's 11-year-old daughter Debbie is now taking lessons as her mother did.

Mrs. Daryl Nutting, mother of six, also has a daughter enrolled in the program. Dianne, 10, is learning to dance. Mrs. Nutting—Betty —started her lessons when she was 12 and has been associated with Mrs. Mortell as student or instructor ever since. Another 'old-timer' teacher is Miss Sonje Johnson, 20, who started when she was four. In making the move to the recreation department, Mrs. Mortell also took along her pianist, Mrs. Edward Cottrell. She has since retired and Mrs. Earl Hoppe is in her fourth year, as accompanist.

Because the program is city-sponsored, only children who live or go to school in Appleton are eligible for the program. For a while the enrollment was over 300, but it had to be decreased to a number the staff could handle. There are about eight in each of the 40 classes that meet each week. Each class is taught by Mrs. Mortell and one assistant, assuring that each child receives individual instruction and attention. The exception, as far as Mrs. Mortell is concerned, is with the beginners. These are taught by Mrs. Streck or Mrs. Nutting, who handle this class in alternate years.

One Kind of Dance

Lessons begin at 4:30 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. They continue right through the supper hour until 9 or 9:30 p.m., depending on the age group scheduled in the evening. Each class period is devoted exclusively to one kind of dancing. Mrs. Mortell believes that this type of teaching enables a student to concentrate on the kind of dancing he or she prefers. If a student wants to study several kinds, he must enroll in several classes.

Most children begin to dance, Mrs. Mortell says, because their parents want them to acquire poise and self-confidence. Very few have notions about a career. Parents are encouraged to sit in during lesson time, and with a ready-made audience, the young hoofers soon get over their fear of being watched.

Many of the dimpled and curly-haired little girls who begin to dance at age five stay with their lessons until they are married. Sometimes, Mrs. Mortell relates, they quit during their busy high school years, but when they graduate, they come back. They find they miss it.

Part of a Family

"To me, they all seem like part of my family", she smiles, "When you see them so little, and watch them grow up, they are almost your own."

Mrs. Mortell has watched more than individuals grow up. Three or four youngsters in a single family have been taking lessons at the same time. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Welsch are an example of this, as are those of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bowers, Mrs. Joan Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Seidl, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Brasch.

The best kind of dancing for a child, in the beginning, Mrs. Mortell believes, is tap. "It helps develop rhythm and a sense of timing." She illustrates her point by telling about a little deaf mute girl who took lessons a few years ago. "She was never out of step. You couldn't pick her out from the rest of the class", she recalls. "In tap dancing, the accomplishment is quicker, and the sense of progress gives the children greater incentive. Many who start with tap branch into other fields, and quite a few now have dance schools of their own.

What does a mother do when her daughter's soldier fiancé asks that the wedding date be changed from many months hence to within a few weeks.

She does what any other woman would do who has unselfishly shared the joys and heartaches of her children . . . who has dreamed and played with her family . . . who has gained insight, understanding and love in her role as mother. She contributes to the happiness of the moment and, refusing to worry over a pressing time schedule, proceeds to make it a "lovely wedding."

Mrs. Lloyd J. Berken, 615 W. Summer St., quickly shrugged off any idea of difficulties involved in planning a wedding for her eldest daughter, Sharon.

"I always dreamed of having all my girls in Sharon's wedding. I wasn't going to let two weeks' notice stop me," she said, "and we didn't feel as if we should ask them to wait."

The understanding mother was called into action when William Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Wood, Phillips, called his fiancée at 5:30 p.m. April 22 to quietly announce that he was being assigned by the Air Force to McCord Air Force Base, Wash., and wanted to take Sharon with him. They would be married May 4.

"Luckily, we could get the church," Mrs. Berken smiled. "After dinner, we went shopping and by 8:30 p.m. we had bought a wedding gown."

Mrs. Berken called a friend who agreed to make an identical dress for Penny, the junior bridesmaid. Bridesmaids dresses were chosen and fitted.

With a wave of a hand, Mrs. Berken dispelled any concern for arranging a reception. "Nowadays all one has to do is call the place where it will be held and they handle all the arrangements!"

Flowers were no problem. Mrs. Berken insisted, "We just told the florist what color dresses the girls were wearing and he made the choice."

Invitations were ordered on Thursday. The printer sent the envelopes home with the Berkens, their heads and didn't know what to do," she wailed. Her worry was short-lived, however, as the veils arrived soon after she arose Saturday.

"We all pitched in and addressed the envelopes," she laughed. "It became a little confusing when the inside envelopes were mixed with the outer envelopes and we found we had a batch of addressed envelopes without glue on the night."

After a brief discussion, the Berkens decided there just wasn't As one of the girls reflected, in wedding."

A mother's helping hand is always available when she prepares her daughter for a wedding. Above, Mrs. Berken adjusts the bow on Jean's dress. Below, Miss Janice Spierings, Little Chute, lends a helping hand to her cousin as she dresses Linda's hair. All of the hustle and bustle of the wedding is not going to upset three-year-old Connie's schedule. At left, she blithely watches cartoons on TV and ignores the household activity on the day of the wedding.

Being a bride carries no priority when five sisters are dressing for a wedding. Miss Sharon Berken found it was still "first come, first served" when she lined up in front of the bathroom door the day of her wedding. Her sister, Jean, smiles triumphantly at Patt, Sharon, Penny and Linda as she walks through the door "ready to go," above. A final combing of an unruly lock, careful adjustment of the veil, a straightening of the hem and the bride is ready to go. At right, Sharon and Penny smile approvingly at each other as they prepare to leave for the church. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Your Problems

Thoughtfulness Loses Virtue When Considered After Death

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your splendid advice to the daughter-in-law who thought the old man should eat in his room because his palsied hand spilled food on the tablecloth brought back some bitter memories.

My husband's mother made her home with us when we were first married. She was hard of hearing and grew worse as she became older. It was annoying to me when she'd ask my friends to repeat what they had said. Frequently she'd interrupt with a remark which had nothing to do with the discussion. I was too young and thoughtless to realize that the poor soul was trying to be friendly and show interest.

One evening when we were expecting some special guests I asked her to please remain in her room. I'll never forget the hurt look on her face. I was immediately sorry and apologized. But she never joined us after that. I coaxed her time and time again but she always had some excuse — something she "had to do" in her room.

It's been many years since my mother-in-law passed away, but not a day goes by that I don't regret that I didn't treat her better when she was with us.

It's too late for me, but perhaps some other young daughter-in-law can benefit from my experience. Thank you for reading this — and thank you one million times if you print it. — Remorseful

DEAR REMORSEFUL: I appreciate your thoughtful letter. I'm especially grateful for the opportunity to publish the letter on Mother's Day. So often the book is closed without warning. Blessed and at peace are those who have no regrets.

Dancing Classes Are Family Affair

The former Judy Stab has a school in Wausau. Burton Baerwald teaches in Dale and Betty Nutting formerly taught in Seymour and Little Chute. Dianne DeShaney, in Appleton, took lessons from Mrs. Mortell for eight years, and Herb Bush is now a professional dancer.

Ready for Show

Her achievements in her chosen field will be put on view this year when her students present "The Wonderful World of Dance" at 2 p.m. Saturday at Appleton High School. All students except beginners take part in the review, nervously and excitedly going through the wonders they have learned. Some will undoubtedly be excellent, some less so, and a few will probably be sure they were "awful." But all will have added to their own experience and event they will never forget.

One evening when we were expecting some special guests I asked her to please remain in her room. I'll never forget the hurt look on her face. I was immediately sorry and apologized. But she never joined us after that. I coaxed her time and time again but she always had some excuse — something she "had to do" in her room.

Finds Satisfaction in Variety of Projects

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor
"This is the way you really get to know people, and how wonderful both men and women are in giving their time to others," Mrs. LeRoy Stohlman, 725 S. Connell St., says of her work in many worthy community projects.

Because she is one of these herself, she has earned this week's Post-Crescent orchid award as an outstanding Fox Cities woman.

Mrs. Stohlman came to Appleton in July, 1941, when her late husband, an attorney, was named National Secretary for the Aid Association for Lutherans. She grew up in Lincoln, Nebraska, where she taught commercial subjects and worked in an office after graduation, from the University of Nebraska.

She remembers that she was involved with Cub and Girl Scouting during the war years, when many mothers were working. "That's when you really got your share of jobs to do," she laughs. Her three children, Roy, 24, will graduate from Harvard Law School in June; Albert, 23, will graduate in June from the University of Puget Sound, having earned a full year's extra credits while serving as a member of the 32nd Division, and Shirley, Mrs. Jack Gillespie, Appleton, a graduate of the University of Nebraska — are her greatest treasures. Mrs. Stohlman comments, echoing the sentiments of all mothers. And she adds that she believes children are proud of mothers who help in the projects they love.

A Starting Place

Her work with scouting was on the beginning for Mrs. Stohlman. As a member of AAUW she was chairman of the 1950 movie project that first brought children's classics to the theaters here. She has also worked on the annual Book Sale and was treasurer of the organization. Her work has included the presidency of the Valparaiso Guild, the post of program chairman, and her present membership on the program committee. In her church, Faith Lutheran, she was first president of the Ladies Guild, and at present has charge of the Cradle Roll.

Mrs. Stohlman's interests have also led to her serving her second year as a member of the VNA Board and as assistant treasurer. She is in her fifth year on the board of United Community Services. As a representative of VNA she will be responsible for five wards during the fund drive. In UCS she has also been a member of the Research and Planning Committee and the Nominating Committee.

Consolidate Drives

Speaking of the services provided through UCS Mrs. Stohlman says she would like to see a central office for the entire area, from Neenah to Kaukauna, served by a central office. She is all in favor of united health drives, with the various agencies coming together for a single solicitation. This would save woman power, she says, and cut down on the number of drives conducted in the area. One for health and one for services would be all that was necessary.

Of all the undertakings in which she has been involved, many in real need, she says, that Mrs. Stohlman says the most rewarding has been her work with Appleton Memorial Hospital. Mr. Stohlman was chairman of the day, when you know you've contributed in some way, even if it is the possibility of the hospital. Widow is no more than the dispelling of ed in 1956, Mrs. Stohlman says a bit of loneliness.

In Many Capacities

She has been on the Hospital Board since 1957 and was secretary for two years. She was the Auxiliary's first treasurer, also served as president, head of publicity and bulletin and worked on many projects. During her term as president, the auxiliary, then only three years old, was invited to tell its story at the National Convention of American Hospital Associations and Auxiliaries. Mrs. Stohlman has held painting workshops, teaching her hobby of ros-making to members who work on bazaar items; she has decorated eggs with tiny figures to be sold at the bazaars and has helped with the Glitter and Glow workshop.

In the time left over for hobbies, Mrs. Stohlman says she likes the exercise of golf, but not the score.

Mrs. Stohlman would advise widows to make lives of their own by giving to others. There are so many in real need, she says, that And there is nothing like the satisfaction at the end of the day, when you know you've contributed in some way, even if it is the possibility of the hospital. Widow is no more than the dispelling of ed in 1956, Mrs. Stohlman says a bit of loneliness.

hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Those big bleach bottles which all of your readers seem to be using for many, many things can also be used for something else away. I have never seen in your column.

Did you know that they make wonderful bird houses? They do! Here's all you do:

Rinse the bottle out carefully and discard the top. The reason for discarding the top is so that odor from the bacteria which might collect inside where the birds gather can have an escape hatch. The top is so narrow that when it rains heavily it cannot come in the bottle anyway.

The next thing to do is cut two or three small holes in the bottom of the bottle. This allows for any moisture which might collect in the bottle to drop through. Take a sharp knife and cut at least two holes on each side of the bottle about the size of a silver dollar. The reason for the two holes

The paper is easily removed and you just wipe the streak again and you are all finished!

Extra Crust

Dear Heloise:

After making my pie crust, I have some dough left over. I use some filling to make a "jelly" roll with the leftover pie mix. I cook this until it is golden brown — about half an hour. Sure saves the waste of that leftover pie crust!

To Wash Bottles

Dear Heloise:

When washing milk bottles, put a little baking soda in the bottle, add one-half cup of water and a piece of paper toweling and shake thoroughly. This will clean it in a jiffy.

Use Day Starch

Dear Heloise:

When I iron a garment and find a grease spot left in it, I sprinkle a thin layer of dry starch on the spot and run the hot iron over it.

The starch absorbs the grease! I then dust off the starch and continue ironing. It works every time.

Fish Cleaning Proves Happy Job for Jolly Woman

BY CHARLES HOUSE

SKETCHES BY FRED SCHMIDT
If common folks busied themselves with coats of arms there would be a flashing blade on the escutcheon of Mrs. Allen Zeugner of Pensaukee. That jolly lady cleans fish for a living and her flashing blade is an oft-honed knife, the tool of her trade.

The symbol would be fairly won, and with accompanying honor. Mrs. Zeugner, one of the swiftest of the swift fish boners at the E. C. Swaer and Son fish house, has fileted a finny total of some 7,384,000 of the critters.

Pert and pretty at 37, Mrs. (June) Zeugner ranks as one of the best of the old pros who ply their razor-sharp blades. It is not coincidental that the fastest trio of fish fileters at the long-lived Swaer house are sisters — June, who has been at the art for 18 years; Ruth ("Blessy") Hooten who has worked there for 21; and Lula ("Pooch") Darr who came to the Swaer fishery more than 12 years ago.

The sisters, all married, slice through their chores at an incredible rate of speed and about equal. On a good day with a keen blade, each member of the threesome can file about 200 pounds of fish a day — some 2,600 perch apiece, for a family total of about 7,800 fish.

Of course, said June, there are tricks to the trade. Dexterity is important, but experience is the best teacher.

"We all help new girls when they are just starting, but the speed comes only with experience," June said.

Top Speed
Does more and more experience create greater and greater speed in fish fileting?

June thinks not. "Now," she said, "I'm as fast as I'll ever be. Hands can move just so fast and mine go about as quick as they can ever go."

Some 21 years ago, when the dark-haired, dark-eyed lady spent her first day at the trade, she got through the long day with a slow, cautious knife and earned only 35 cents. The rate then—or shall we say the fish scale—was three cents per pound. Today the scale for the fileters is seven cents a pound for the small perch and six cents for the larger ones. Those in the whopper class, like pike, are fileted on an hourly rate—$1.00 per pound.

Mrs. Zeugner uses a knife with a plant blade and zips through the fish in the prescribed manner: First the head is amputated and the knife is then pushed into the back of the fish near the caudal fin, the sharp blade moving tailward. Then, deftly, the blade is turned around and sped in a quick, flashing move to the front of the fish, the knife feeling its way along the ribs of the critter. Now the fish is flopped over, the knife is inserted at the front and moved downward again following the ribs to the tail. The skeleton is flipped out and the fish is clean and trim and fileted.

"I must have a sharp knife," June says, and she sees that it's sharp indeed. She uses a file, a whetstone and a steel and she sharpens her knife about 25 times daily.

Perch Challenge

June, because of her long familiarity with the smaller Lake Michigan perch (12 to 14 in. a pound) prefers fileting them, though the larger Lake Erie fish are no challenge, nor are the Lake Michigan jumbos (Seven to nine in a pound).

Though commercial fishing was once the virtual full economy of the little bayside community of Pensaukee here in Deconto County, today there are only three full-time fishermen operating out of there—all brothers. They are Raymond, Francis and Norbert Swaer, brothers to Arthur Swaer who is president of the company.

On a very good day, each of the fishermen can take about 1,200 pounds of fish from Lake Michigan but on many windy days the hard-working men cannot so much as lift a net.

Polluted Catch

Often, too, their catches—particularly those taken from the south end of the bay, near Big Suamico—have been in polluted water and their taste as well as their odor is affected. They taste and smell—say local people—like a combination of fuel oil and sulphur. June, for example, can bone fish by the hour and yet tell immediately when she filets one taken from the bay's south end.

The ladies who ply the sharp blades in the fileting art are careful. Nevertheless, they get their share of small cuts and jabs from the keen knives. The worst cut in memory was a slice on the arm of June's sister Blessy. The cut required seven stitches, but it was an accidental one caused by a bump rather than in the workaday duties of fileting.

Comfortable Garb

Each of the fish boners—there are presently six of them on the long bench—wears blue or black jeans, a woolen shirt (usually one of the hubby's discarded ones), and long rubber or plastic aprons. They wear tennis shoes inside of shin-high rubber boots.

If the garb isn't modish, nobody cares; it's comfortable and practical and the ladies spend much of their table-time in lady-like gabble on the subject of many things. "We tell a lot of jokes," June says, "and we all laugh and have a wonderful time together."

If the fish smell like fish—and they do—the deft ladies don't mind that, either. One gets accustomed to things. And June, who began long ago when she was 17, is well accustomed to fish. Except for three of the 21 years after her beginning there, the jolly, good-hearted lady has known a great many fish and she prefers the smell of them to the smell of a barn.

There are occasional annoyances, and among them are the occasional lamprey eels which are brought in with the catch. "They're horrible," June said, "but they don't frighten me like they do some of the girls. Besides, they seem to be fewer and fewer every year."

But the ladies have fun anyhow as they ply their blades. Their work requires skill and attention and they are proud of the speed and dexterity. As the fish come to them, they

American Fights Guatemalan Reds With Housing Plan

BY JACK RUTLEDGE

GUATEMALA (AP)—A young American is testing the theory that home ownership can effectively halt communism's spread in Latin America.

William F. Luce has enabled 4,000 Guatemalans to move from unsanitary huts in slums into homes built of concrete blocks with tile floors.

They are among the cheapest in the world, $640 to $700, including lot and such items as paved streets, running water, electricity and sanitation.

3-Room Houses

The houses have three rooms with kitchen and bath, and fenced-in yards front and back. Owners have the right to make additions, as they wish, and can sell at any time, or turn them over to heirs.

Down payments are $100 and A. & M., and calls Woodside, monthly payments are around $16 over a four-year period.

Slum dwellers have paid $12 to $18 monthly in rent alone for their unsanitary, often waterless and candle-lit one-room shacks.

Luce started his program two years ago. He has built 600 low-cost homes and is continuing with about 50 a month. He figures each home averages seven occupants.

The Miracle

The project is centered in a tropical area overlooking the capital and in turn overlooked by a fringe of dormant volcanoes. He calls it El Milagro—The Miracle.

Luce says he makes no money on this—his profits come from higher-priced homes he builds have been pre-scaled by water under high-pressure. Except for a few scales near the caudal fin which the ladies remove with a farm-type currycomb, the fileting chore is quick, and is something to stir pride.

"After all," as Mrs. Arthur Swaer says, "Anybody can pick beans, but it takes real skill to filet a fish."

elsewhere, from real estate, financing and engineering.

"The best way to fight communism is to put people into their own homes," Luce says. "To the Latin American, even a small home means more than anything in his life, if it is his own home."

Little Attention

Alan Carnoy, another American builder living in Mexico City, has the same idea. He has written two books on the subject.

Neither Luce nor Carnoy has been able to get much U.S. government attention. Both take issue with the U.S. foreign aid program as it applies to housing.

Luce has pushed his program here without government aid but he now has U.S. assistance for a similar project in Honduras.

Luce was born in Lubbock, Tex., attended Texas Tech and Texas A. & M., and calls Woodside, Calif., his home.

British Tourists Get Bargain Cruise Rates

LONDON (AP)—British tourists will be able next year to cruise to New York, stay there three days and return home—all for $126 minimum.

That is the promise of a cut-rate travel man, Max Wilson, in partnership with the Canadian Pacific and Union-Castle Shipping Lines.

Wilson, a 34-year-old South African, is chartering the 20,000-ton liner Reina del Mar for seven voyages out of Liverpool—five to New York and two to Montreal.

Tourist class fares, including a three-day stop in New York during which the ship will be used as a floating hotel, range from $126 to $210. First class passengers will pay $294-$616 for the 18-day cruise.

Passengers must be members of Travel Savings Limited, which Wilson runs. They pay an entrance fee of $8.82 per family. The holiday is saved for through regular payments.

Post-Crescent Artist Fred Schmidt gives lineal expression to the amazement evoked by the realization Mrs. Allen Zeugner, the Pensaukee fish cleaning lady, has cleaned 7,384,000 fish during 21 years on the job.

Split-Level Has Freedom of Movement

This Handsome Four or five bedroom split has no less than nine exterior entrances, considerably easing the traffic flow in or out. The facade features crisp lines with white brick veneer and wide horizontal siding. Pierced brick walls accent the main entry.

This 11' by 13' Reception room is so roomy that it qualifies as a room in itself. The floor is tiled for beauty and ease of upkeep. Fluted glass sidelights are on both sides of the flush front entrance. The family room is visible beyond; stairs led to the living room level.

BY JULES LOH

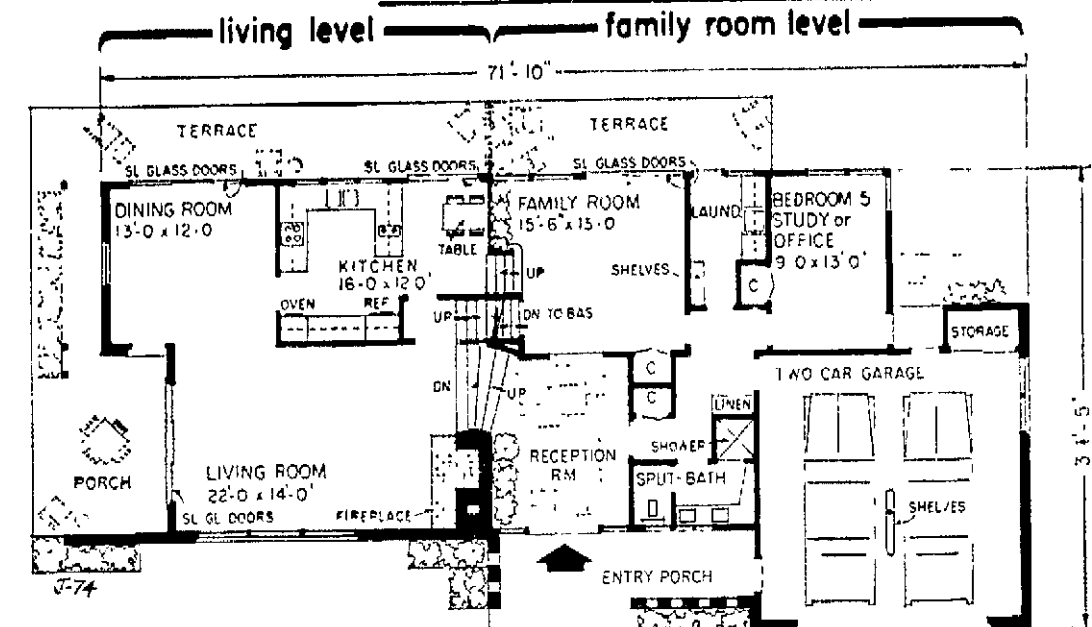

Overcrowding isn't an uncommon problem for a large family, but sometimes it's more the fault of poor planning than lack of space.

Whenever there's only one route to the backyard, say, or to the garage or the lavatory, the result is jammed hallways, worn spots on the floor and similar telltale signs of congestion and poor traffic flow. When this happens even a large home feels overcrowded.

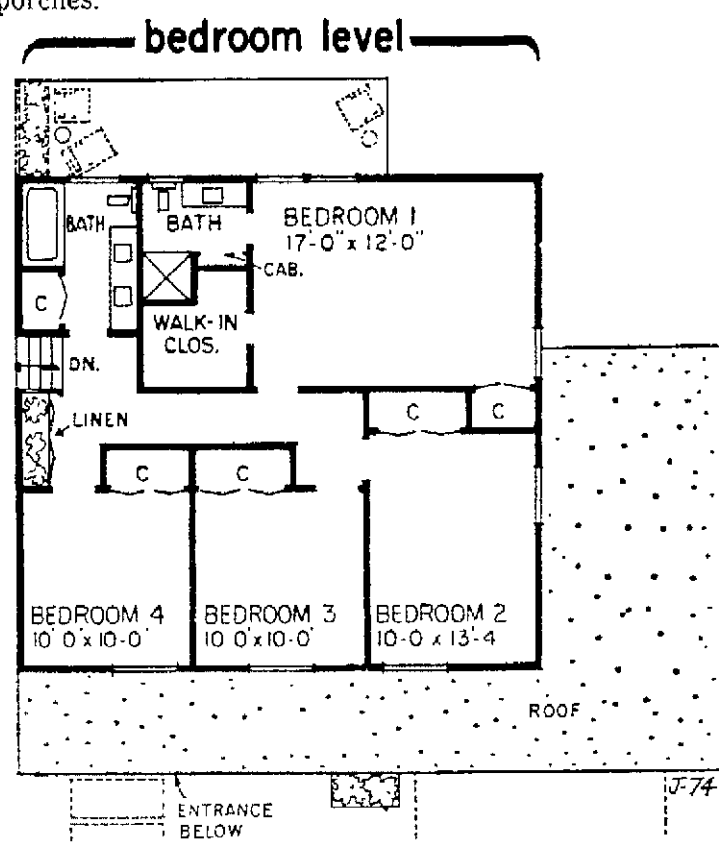

Today's house of the week contains up to five bedrooms in only 1,572 square feet of ground cover, the habitable area of the living and bedroom levels. Because of its split-level design, there's an extra 707 square feet on the family room level not counting the two-car garage.

Small Area

With so much house in such a relatively small area you'd think it would be crowded. On the contrary, the space is so well laid out there is complete freedom of movement between rooms, from one area of activity to another, and from indoors to outdoors. In fact there are no less than nine exterior entrances not counting sliding glass exterior doors. The doors from the garage to the front and rear porches.

The Living and Bedroom levels contain 1,572 square feet; the family room contains 707 square feet excluding the garage. Ease of traffic circulation is the hallmark of this home. It has nine exterior doors not counting the doors from the garage to the front and rear porches.

The house, design J-74 in the series, is the product of architect Rudolph A. Matern. It's exterior has crisp, handsome lines with the white brick and wide horizontal siding. Pierced brick walls accent the main entrance.

Its excellent circulation features begin with the foyer — an 11' by 13' area so spacious Matern rightly labels it a "reception room." From here you can go direct to any area of the house, on any level, without using any room as a passageway.

Additional Details
The main entry is especially glamorous with a covered porch and fluted glass sidelights on both sides of the flush front entrance. The reception foyer is tiled, for both beauty and ease of upkeep. The house has a full basement equipped with two nearby closets for wraps, and there is an adjoining powder room with double lavatories and a long vanity. Actually the powder room is a full bath, complete with stall shower, which makes the extra grade-level room ideal either for a bedroom or professional office. The room has convenient movement through, in or out of the house.

A large laundry (which also has a rear door) is between this room and the family room. The family room is characterized by an abundance of glass, including sliding glass doors to the rear terrace, and has a dramatic balcony overlooking the breakfast area and kitchen.

The living room-dining room-kitchen level is live steps up from the foyer. An upper rear terrace connects to a covered side porch, and all three rooms—living room, dining room and kitchen — have exterior entrances not counting sliding glass exterior doors. The dining room also has another door leading to the wide section of the covered porch for outside dining convenience.

Upstairs, there are three good sized bedrooms across the front, a master bedroom suite in the rear. The master bedroom has an adjoining full bath, a huge walk-in closet and a second wall closet. The main bath has a spacious linen closet and double lavatories and is convenient both to the family bedrooms and the living room. A second linen closet is located in the upstairs hall.

The house has a full basement. The dimensions of the home are 71'10" wide by 34'5" deep.

New Londoner Hauls 90 Tons of Surplus Food

Over Bus Route Covering 3,167 Miles

Post-Crescent Staff Writer
NEW LONDON—Each morning, five days a week, two white and black buses roll from New London loaded with up to seven tons of food. This food, all top grade government surplus commodities, is distributed to over 11,000 people in a six county area.

The buses owned by Theodore Thomas, operator of United Counties Distributors, have regular stops in each of the six counties where the food is distributed to low income families, those receiving public assistance and people receiving Social Security.

The government sponsored surplus food commodities program was started several years ago but only during the last two years has the program been carried out locally.

Seven Counties

Thomas organized United Counties Distributors in 1962 and has now contracted with seven counties to warehouse and distribute the food products. Counties now served by U.C.D. are Waupaca, Portage, Winnebago, Shawano, Fond du Lac, Waushara and Outagamie. The contract with Outagamie County just recently was signed and deliveries will start May 22. The firm is now the largest distributor of surplus food in the state of Wisconsin.

The program to distribute the free food to qualified families is under federal, state and county control. People who are receiving the commodities must first be certified by the welfare director in the county in which they live.

At regularly scheduled stops in each county people come with baskets and boxes to pick up their allotments of such commodities as meat, butter, lard, cheese, beans, rice, corn meal, flour, dry milk, rolled wheat and peanut butter.

Each of the U.C.D. buses is staffed by two employees, a driver who also breaks down food orders at the stops and a secretary to record orders on control cards.

3,167 Miles

During the month a total of 3,167 miles is traveled by the two buses. Thomas said this will increase as soon as deliveries start in Outagamie County. The monthly average of over 90 tons of food distributed will increase to over the 100 ton mark as soon as Outagamie County service starts.

At the New London warehouses individual shipments of food are received each month for each county. A strict inventory is kept. Commodities allotted for one county is never mixed with those of another county. In case any food is left after delivery it is marked with the county it belongs to and is kept separate from any other supplies.

Each month U.C.D. submits a report to each county of food distributed and how much will be needed for the next month. The next month's supply is then ordered by the county welfare department and shipped from warehouses in Green Bay and Shawano to New London.

Food such as butter, canned meat, lard and cheese are kept in cold storage until it is ready for distribution. The other commodities are kept in dry storage. When cold storage items are placed on the bus they are kept in special refrigerated compartments.

Most of the food items are packaged in either one or two pound packages except some of the flour which is in five pound packages. All food is packed under federal government supervision and packages are clearly marked that the food is government surplus commodities and cannot be sold or exchanged.

A "First" in the Building industry is the stainless steel door and frame now being introduced by a Cincinnati manufacturing firm. The steel door offers three special advantages: (1) ease of specification; (2) lower cost through production line methods, and (3) more uniform quality in fabrication. Stainless steel can't be chipped, corroded or worn away, and is described as ideal for institutional users such as offices, hospitals, schools and factories.

Tissue Makers Slash Prices

Kimberly-Clark,
Other Firms Cut
Wholesale Rates

A retail price cut of one cent per roll of two-ply toilet tissue is expected to result from wholesale price reductions by manufacturers, including Kimberly-Clark Corp.

The cut may also result in a two-cent reduction in the retail price of two-roll packages. Kimberly-Clark told the Wall Street Journal it reduced its tissue price 10 per cent to $9.55 a case from $10.61, effective in about two-thirds of the company's marketing area. A spokesman added that prices in the remaining areas, chiefly in the East and South, would be cut June 1.

No other K-C products are involved in the price cuts. Scott Paper Co., Philadelphia, made a 9.1 per cent price cut on its tissue to wholesalers and chain stores, effective last Monday.

Proctor and Gamble Co., Cincinnati, reduced wholesale prices on its tissue to $9.55 a case from $10.50, and Crown Zellerbach Corp., San Francisco, cut its price on a 96-roll case of tissue to about $9.63 from about $10.50.

the quantities sufficient to supplement their food needs. Thomas said, after food has been distributed in a county for a few months people find what foods they need and use and in several cases people do not take all the food they are entitled to.

Presently all receivers of the food are being recertified and standards are being lowered to make more people eligible to receive the commodities. People receiving the food find

Operate Your Mower Safely

Whirling Blade
Creates Hazards
To Home Owner

Warm weather is here and lawn mowing time has arrived. Listed below are a few precautions that the home owner should practice when cutting his lawn to protect himself, people around him and his mowing equipment.

Know your machine. Study the operator's manual, particularly the safety suggestions. Keep your lawn mower in good repair, putting special emphasis on the safety features of the unit such as: guards, discharge chutes, etc. Only proper care can maintain the many safety characteristics originally designed into the machine.

Before you start to mow, make certain that all foreign objects such as rocks, bones, toys, metal, etc., are removed from the lawn. The whirling rotary mower blade can throw such objects with considerable force. Be on constant alert for objects you may have missed. Always be aware of the direction your mower is discharging.

When starting the unit, be certain that you or others around you are a safe distance from the cutting mechanism. Never leave the mower running unattended. Do not attempt to adjust your lawn mower unless the spark plug wire is disconnected. Run the unit at a comfortable walking speed — walk, do not run. Be careful of your footing, particularly on slippery turf and hills.

Paperboard Orders Hit 7-Month High

Seven-month highs were hit last week by paperboard orders and backlog.

Box makers didn't attach particular importance to the order surge, according to the Wall Street Journal. They noted that March, April and May are the three big months of the year, and that the first week of any month is the major order period. Orders last week totaled 396,753 tons, up from 360,281 the week before but down from 39,118 in the like 1962 week. Orders in the first week of April were 383,608 tons.

Three-Stall Milking Parlor Adapted for 50-Cow Herds

MADISON — Here's a plan for both. The vestibule leading to the a three-stall milking parlor. The parlor, milking room and toilet room might be enclosed to keep out, cold winter winds.

Blueprints showing the construction details for the parlor are available for 50 cents from the Department of Agricultural Engineering at the University of Wisconsin.

University of Wisconsin agricultural engineers say the milking parlor is adapted for herds up to 40 or 50 cows where one man does the milking. Other styles of parlors for this size of herd are the walk-through and the herringbone. One man can milk about 25 cows per hour with this plan. For larger herd sizes, the engineers recommend a two-man milking operation.

This plan can be adapted for bucket milking or for cleaned-in-place pipeline milking. It can be used with loose housing, but it's also finding a place in larger stall barn herds. This plan fits

Appleton Woman Donates Ancient Music Box to Lawrence College

Plays Old Metal Discs Similar To Phono Record

A large German-made music box, forerunner of the modern phonograph, has been given to the Lawrence Conservatory of Music by Mrs. Karl Haugen, 1047 E. Nevada St.

The music box is of the Symphonium type, manufactured in Leipzig, Germany, after 1885. It is a solid wooden cabinet 15 by 18 by 10 inches, with a crank at one side for winding the spring.

Instead of a turntable, there are two sets of sounding bars, like the teeth of a comb, which are set into vibration by adjacent sets of revolving cogged wheels. With the music box, Mrs. Haugen has presented more than 30 "records" which are metal discs about the size of a regular phonograph record, and stamped so tiny metal tabs protrude from the underside.

The tabs catch small wheel cogs mounted below them as the record slowly revolves, and the cogs in turn strike the sounding bars. The placement of the metal tabs on the record determines which notes are struck, and when. The sound of the music box is full and resonant because of a double set of sounding bars. The large cabinet serves as a sounding board.

Records Presented

Among the records presented and John Philip Sousa's "Washington Post March", Mendelssohn's "Danube Waltz", and a man in a "Silent Night", northern Wisconsin before being came in contact with levers at predetermined intervals.

Along with this development came the first automaton — life-sized figures that strike bells on the hour. Many travelers to Europe have observed these figures whirling, pivoting and clanging the bells with their mallets.

It said that from a certain church tower in Belgium one could see 128 other steeples, each equipped to play chimes by clockwork.

In the 15th century, there is record of a rotating barrel mechanism mounted on a cart to be pushed in funeral processions to chime out dirges for the dead.

In the 17th century, watchmakers began to bring out miniature clock-striking mechanisms, but they were so expensive they were owned only by royalty.

Haydn has written a number of pieces for a "flute clock," and Mozart wrote three substantial works for hand-cranked organ.

One of the most fantastic instruments ever devised for producing music was the Panharmonicon built by Maelzel, inventor of the metronome. He duplicated in his instrument an approximation of the organ, chimes, flute, trumpet, clarinet, drum, cymbal, triangle, violin and 'cello. The inventor's good friend Beethoven wrote a composition for the contraption — his "Battle of Vittoria" commemorating Wellington's victory over Napoleon. It was later transcribed for orchestra and is heard to this day.

This Portrait of Dr. Douglas Knight by Thomas Dietrich, Lawrence College artist-in-residence, will be a pictorial record of Dr. Knight's presidency at Lawrence when he becomes president of Duke University. The painting is having its first showing in the current faculty exhibit at the Worcester Gallery.

Portraits Steal Limelight of Faculty Exhibit

Paintings of Knight, Youngchild Unveiled In Worcester Show

BY JAY JOSLYN
Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

Two very different portraits by Thomas Dietrich may steal the limelight of the current Worcester Gallery exhibit by the Lawrence College art department faculty, but they don't tell the entire story.

The portraits for which the college's artist-in-residence was commissioned are of Casper Youngchild and Dr. Douglas Knight.

Dietrich produced a slick portrait in the traditional manner for Youngchild, the octogenarian who became the college's largest single benefactor with his $1 million gift for the science building that will carry his name and house his portrait.

Vigorous Style

In the portrait of College President Knight, Dietrich stepped beyond the commonplace; the painting has a rough, vigorous texture and the composition is off-center. The work is to be the permanent pictorial reminder of Knight at Lawrence after he leaves to become president of Duke University.

Perhaps Dr. Knight and I will be the only people who will like the portrait," Dietrich said, "but I wanted to catch the abundance of energy with which he has endowed his tenure of president here."

Joining Dietrich in the exhibit is Michael Brandt, completing his first full year as assistant professor at Lawrence. The former head of the Appleton High School art department and consistent winner of craftsmanship prizes has produced a sort of symposium of media.

Modern Viewpoint

Brandt's modern viewpoint is lent in his casein nature studies usually dominated by the traceries of stark tree limbs and branches.

Fox Valley Artists Unit Plans 6th Art Show for Shopping Center Mall

Paris in Spring Theme for 2-Day Exhibit Starting on Saturday

The Fox Valley Artists Association will turn the mall of a Fox Cities shopping center into a bit of "Paris in Spring" Saturday for the two-day run of its 6th annual Valley Fair Art and Craft Show.

More than 50 artists will be exhibiting over 100 pieces of their craft for the two days. Twenty of the pieces will be selected for the 1963 Fox Valley Association traveling art show that will appear in seven Fox valley communities through December.

Peter Boyajian, director of arts and vice president of the Art Originals Gallery and School of Milwaukee, will be the judge choosing the traveling show pieces and the winners of the seven cash awards.

Popularity Prize

However, everyone attending the show also will be able to act as judge. The association is offering a cash prize for the most popular piece that fits the "Paris in Spring" theme.

The mall-gallery goes also will be able to participate in an art auction that will be conducted by Harvey Jorgensen, Menasha artist and wood sculptor, at 4 p.m. next Sunday.

In addition to the myriads of paintings, ceramics and pieces of sculpture on display, the show also will boast several demonstrations.

The Clay Art Guild, in its first public show, will demonstrate the complete job of pottery making. Other exhibitors will be performing in oil, sculpturing and water color. Barbara Jolly of Appleton and Mrs. Marianne Schwartz of Green Bay will make on-the-spot portrait sketches.

Entries have been received from artists from 13 communities ranging from Green Bay to the north to Fond du Lac to the south and from Manitowoc to the east and Ripon to the west.

The entries reflect the scope of the 10-year-old artist organization.

The Fox Valley Artists were organized by Mrs. Elmer Hall in Green Bay and the association had its first show in the La Baye Gallery of the Neville Public Museum in Green Bay in 1953.

The association originally was restricted to artists from Green Bay and DePere. In 1958, the membership was broadened to include artists throughout the valley. Currently the membership stands at nearly 100 from practically every community in the Fox Valley.

The association annually sponsors the Valley Fair Show, the Winnebago and Art Fair at the Oshkosh Public Museum—scheduled this year for July 14—and the Midwinter Annual at the Neville Public Museum, Green Bay.

New Potter Organization Plans First Public Show

Clay Art Guild To Exhibit With Valley Artists

A new organization promoting an ancient craft will make its public debut in an art show sponsored by one of the area's oldest are organizations next weekend. The show will be the annual Fox Valley Artists Association exhibit in the Valley Fair mall Saturday and next Sunday. The new organization is the Clay Art Guild formed two years ago.

The Fox Valley show will be the first time the Guild will mount an exhibit as an entity, although individual members have won notice in other shows. The debut appearance will be bolstered by demonstrations in which ceramics will be "thrown" and "fired."

The Clay Art Guild was organized under the aegis of Mrs. Lilian Embrey and Mrs. Roger Russell, two of the area's better known potters. It has attracted members of wide interests and is somewhat unique in that the membership is composed of couples.

Guild members include a chemist, a commercial artist, an attorney, a social worker and a professional art educator. All are interested enough to own wheels and kilns of their own.

The moving forces of the Guild, Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Embrey became interested in pottery when they took ceramics courses at the Menasha Vocational School 16 years ago. They perfected themselves in the craft to a point where both became instructors. Many of the Guild members are their former pupils.

Embrey Workshop
Mrs. Embrey's home at 10 Embrey Court is the Guild's meeting place. She has devised a work shop and show room there. The Guild meets informally every two or three weeks.

Pottery is the exclusive interest of the Guild members. There are no sculptors in the Guild. Although most pieces devised are practical there are some aesthetic ceramics produced.

Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Embrey showed sets of ceramic bells and wind chimes at the Appleton Gallery of Arts mid-winter show where he was featured guest artist. His pottery, mainly made from local clays and glazes, has won many prizes.

Block Print Show Honors Human Figure

NEENAH—The exhibit of wood-block prints by Wolfgang Klein at the Bergstrom Museum not only reveals the Milwaukee artist's consummate skill in a difficult medium, it refreshes the art scene with magnificent examples of a draftsman who still can handle the human figure.

Wolfgang Klein of Milwaukee will be at the Bergstrom Museum from 3 to 5 p.m. today to participate in a "meet the artist" reception sponsored by the museum board.

from the representation of the figure on the excuse that they are "solving problems" in space and design. Klein with his native German thoroughness and Old World training holds inviolate the grace, flow and dignity of the human figure.

"This is not to say he eschews 'solving problems.'" His works have strong design, especially in the beautiful pencil drawings of children's heads, but the figure finds a natural place in them and it appears naturally without distortion.

However successful is Klein's handling of the figure, his medium is best used in architectural representations and the precise lining of Wisconsin and especially Milwaukee scenes make up the most striking part of the show that will remain at the Bergstrom through May 26.

Two-Fold Encouragement

Flint, Mich., Creates Post of Community Artist-in-Residence

BY PHIL THOMAS

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—This industrial city, best remembered as the place where the United Auto Workers Union pioneered the sit-down strike, now is pioneering in bringing culture to the people.

It has established a community artist-in-residence program, one of the first in the nation.

Coleman Blumfield, a young artist who began his first piano lessons at 5 and was working with the head of the piano department at Chicago's Roosevelt College when he was 8, is the first to fill the chair which is designed to supply "The services of a master performer . . . year around and free to anyone in the community."

The artist-in-residence program was conceived in 1961 when Blumfield, a 28-year-old native of Chicago, gave a recital here and so impressed a group of citizens that they established the residency. With the Flint Board of Education as manager, it was launched on June 1, 1962.

Its goals are ambitious: — To stimulate musical interest and development in the community — To establish an example for other communities. — To provide financial aid and encouragement to talented young performing artists.

George Baldwin Memorial

Controversial Painting Became Stained Glass Window at Lawrence Dedicated to Attorney

BY MARGUERITE SCHUMANN

The memorial glass inscribed to the Hon. George Baldwin in the Lawrence College Chapel shows a kingly figure carrying a lantern, knocking on a door overgrown with vines.

The picture from which it was made was Holman Hunt's "Light of the World," one of the most controversial canvases by one of the pre-Raphaelite painters. In it, Jesus Christ represents the text, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock."

Even if the Hon. George Baldwin had been less religious and more secular in his interests, the figure might with equal appropriateness be Diogenes hunting for state New York, and for a year worked in the custom house at Derbyline, Vt.

When Baldwin turned 21, "concluding that better opportunities for success were to be found in the West, he came to Wisconsin and established himself in the practice of his profession at Stockbridge, Calumet County, his monetary possessions at that time amounting to about $10."

The memorial window to Judge Baldwin was established by his son, George Benjamin Baldwin, a Lawrence alumnus in the class of 1897 and a trustee of the college.

Artist in Revolt

Holman Hunt, artist of "Light of the World," was one of the three major figures in the 19th Century English school of painting to abandon his ex- ing known as the pre-Raphaelite tensive real estate interests While Brethren. Revolting against the sophistication of their time, they served as mayor, district attorney, decided that the painters before county probate judge, and in 1866 Raphael had been honest men and was elected a member of the Wisconsin State General Assembly emulate them.

In 1870 he was elected to the State Senate for two terms. Judge Baldwin moved to Appleton in 1885 and here he devoted his remaining years to an extensive real estate business, principally in Dakotas, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin. He died Dec. 7, 1907, and was buried in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Sen. Proxmire Tells Oshkosh How To Win Defense, Space Contracts

OSHKOSH—Sen. William Proxmire told area businessmen Saturday morning they were not getting their fair share of government defense work, space and civilian contracts.

The senator made his comments at a business opportunities conference at the Oshkosh YMCA sponsored by Associated Industries of Oshkosh, Inc., in conjunction with Sen. Proxmire.

Proxmire said the government does about $35 billion in contract business each year, and Wisconsin industries should be getting more of this work. During World War II, he said, the midwest did about 30 per cent for the government. It is much less now, he added, and Wisconsin's share has declined even more.

Tell Procedures
Representatives of various government procurement agencies, including the Army, Navy, Air Force and General Services Office, were present to explain procedures for bidding on government contracts.

Also present were five prime government contractors to give general information on subcontracting and specific information on what subcontracts they now had available.

Proxmire told the local businesses government work was not all "gravy." In fact, he said, it is often harder than doing a private job. A contractor can lose as well as make a good profit.

He warned against trying to

Beer Bars Topic of Talks At Oshkosh

Education Day Discussions to be Held at YMCA

The program will begin at 4 p.m. and will include a dinner at 6 p.m. for which reservations are to be made by Monday by calling the YMCA. A panel discussion on the beer drinking age is set for 7:15 p.m. Wednesday.

A short business session will be part of the program and the nominating committee will report its suggested candidates for vice president, treasurer and two board of director posts. The terms of Police Capt. William Gonyea and of Eugene Balts of Oshkosh High School as directors are expiring.

Holdover officers are E. J. "Amos" Larsen, president, Mrs. Clarence Weber, secretary, and Vern Gauger, Mrs. Arthur Larsen, Mrs. Erbin Harenburg and Harry Nankervis, directors.

The persons representing agencies comprising the council will hear talks by Harvey Rowe, Sturgeon Bay, and Arthur Malin, Appleton. The public is invited to all of the talks and to the dinner.

On Study Committee
Rowe was a citizen member of the state legislative council's interim committee to study youthful drinking and driving. He will discuss some of the legislation proposed and passed regarding beer drinking in Wisconsin.

Malin is a state probation and parole agent in Outagamie County. He will discuss the correlation between drinking and crime as based on his experiences.

After the dinner the panel discussion will be moderated by

Appleton Couple Spends 2 Terrifying Days in Revolution-Torn, Tense Haiti

Gerald Luedtke Searched 30 Times at Gunpoint in Visit

BY JACQUELINE FIX

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

An Appleton couple returned last week from two terrifying days in Haiti, a land threatened by invasion from the neighboring Dominican Republic and revolution from within.

What had started out to be a relaxing Caribbean vacation for Mr. and Mrs. Gerald D. Luedtke, 1920 McCarthy Road, became a frightening experience during which they were stopped almost 30 times and searched at gunpoint, heard tales of brutality and fear, and left on the plane which brought the OAS (Organization of American States) mission seeking a peaceful settlement to the crisis.

They went to visit Mrs. Luedtke's uncle, Arthur Herres, formerly vice president, manager and member of the board of directors of the nationalized bank of Haiti and now president-manager and a director of a mortgage loan and real estate corporation on the tiny island nation. Herres worked for the First National Bank, Appleton, before moving to Haiti many years ago. His sister and Mrs. Luedtke's mother is Mrs. Frank Nowak, 520 S. Fairview St.

Get Warning

The Luedtkes received a forewarning of the tense situation when their plane circled over Port-au-Prince, capital of Haiti, at 6:05 p.m. Saturday, April 27. Because a curfew had been called at 6 p.m., the plane was not permitted to land, and they were taken to spend the night in Santo Domingo, capitol of the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

There, not yet knowing of the state of emergency, they found an airport filled with soldiers who had been called in to prepare for possible invasion of Haiti.

Sunday they flew to Port-au-Prince, where Herres met them and explained that he had not cabled them not to come because of the tight censorship and fear that the militia would say he was against the government by keeping tourists away.

Gunpoint Checks

They found a country swarming with militia—"14 and 16-year-old peasants who never had a gun in their hands before"—and plainclothesmen. During their visit, cut short because of the crisis, they were stopped at checkpoints 27 times and ordered out of their car at gunpoint, to wait with hands raised while the militia searched the car, luggage and purses. "You say nothing for fear they will get angry and shoot," they said.

Near the airport they passed President Duvalier's palace, guarded by tanks and his personal militia—he does not trust the regular army. The streets were deserted and 80 per cent of the shops closed while they were there, they said. They stopped at a grocery store, much like a neighborhood market in Appleton, but with armed men holding machine guns in front.

Guards Killed

Herres showed them the school attended by his daughter and by

Outagamie County Trying to Solve Bogus Check Threat

Sheriff, Court Differ Over Methods of Handling 'Artists'

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Is Outagamie County an easy target for the worthless check passer?

"Quite possibly," county law enforcement officials agree, but a good solution to the problem has been a point of discussion among officials for the past several weeks.

County Judge Gustave Keller has taken a stand against authorizing county law enforcement officials to spend county funds to chase "artists" who have passed worthless checks in the county, then have "skipped" the area.

Sheriff Calvin Spice has argued that a "hard chase" of so-called check artists would establish the county's reputation as a "tough county to pass checks in."

Harsh 'Deterrent'

Dist. Atty. Nick F. Schaefer said the courts have been exercising a harsh "deterrent" action against the worthless check passer by handing out jail sentences and fines, as well as requiring restitution. In many counties, Schaefer said, the courts are willing to dismiss the complaint if the restitution is made.

The "peg" on which the discussions have been hung apparently has been the reluctance of the court to authorize a trip by sheriff authorities to Arizona to return an Outagamie County man being held there who has passed over 400 in worthless checks in the area.

Spice said the court has denied permission to send authorities to Arizona to pick up the violator. Spice said he was told the expense to the county does not justify the trip.

According to the sheriff, if authorities are not allowed to "chase" violators into other areas, Outagamie County will become an easy touch among criminals who will be quick to learn that they will not be bothered for crimes if they have left this area.

Judge Keller, however, said he does not feel the law agencies, the sheriff's department, his court and the district attorney should be used as "bill collectors" for merchants and other citizens who have been "taken" by the check artist.

Wants Money Back

"I believe the merchant has a responsibility which he is not living up to," Judge Keller said. "when he is allowing persons to cash checks in his store without proper safeguards. The minute he is stung," Judge Keller said, "he comes to us and wants us to get his money back."

"If we faced the merchant and asked him to pay back to the county the money which it costs to chase down his check, he would be more than willing to stand the loss of the check."

On the other hand, Spice said, as long as the worthless check infraction is a violation of ordinances, it should be "followed through" with proper enforcement.

"If we are to ask every citizen to foot the bill for every investigation, there would be no need for police service," he said. "We don't expect the person who was robbed, or the person who was murdered to pay the bill for catching up with the offender," Spice added.

Schaefer said the problem cannot be solved by extradition, because passing of worthless or "no account" checks is a misdemeanor and extradition proceedings do not cover misdemeanor violations.

Forgery of a check, however, is a different story, and states will extradite prisoners charged with forgery.

"However, the procedure is long," Schaefer said, "and a non-cooperative state official can tie up the whole thing." Schaefer said Outagamie County is tied up in an extradition procedure now over an Illinois man charged with forgery here. The procedure has been in the mill over three months, and the man is no closer now to the Outagamie County jail than he was three months ago.

Sheriff Lt. Jack Zuelzke cited the recent case of a California youth who "passed through" Outagamie County and spread over $200 in "no account" checks, then left again for California.

Zuelzke said the youth may have done the same thing throughout the country, financing his way from state to state, cashing a few checks for small amounts of money in each area. Over a period of time and over a large part of the country, the checks may have added up to a great deal.

"It's doubtful though," Zuelzke

Apostles Clock in Oshkosh Museum Faces Restoration

Exhibit Just Wore Out After 70-Year History

OSHKOSH — The most popular exhibit at the Oshkosh Public Museum will be back on display in about another month when the refurbishing of the famous Apostles Clock is completed.

Most of the work is being done by Robert Hruska, assistant director of the museum and curator of anthropology. "We are completely re-doing the clock from scratch," Hruska said. This includes a complete overhauling of the mechanical works and the finish to the cabinet.

The only outside assistance is a professional to refinish the woodwork. "A clock repairman was not called in because Kitz was not a watchmaker," Hruska said. He was referring to Mathias Kitz, an inventor of wood-working machinery, who devoted six years of his life to building the magnificent time piece from 1892 to 1898.

Wore Out

The clock ran almost perfectly until about a year ago. "It simply wore out," Hruska commented. Most of the clock's action is controlled by strings and the strings rotted. "Now the problem is finding which pulley goes with which lever."

Kitz was an inventive genius, and everything, including gears and figurines, were handmade. On every hour and half-hour the ritual of the 12 Apostles passing before Christ is repeated to the background of music.

The figurines, almost a foot tall, are set upon a circular platform in the center of the clock's mantel. On either side are two sight, a door opens in each wing, wings while overhead in a niche the left depicting a shepherd stands a stately angel poised next scene, and the right depicts the crucifixion. Above each is a smaller door which opens to show a small angel.

Moving Figures

Exactly on the hour and half-hour, the angel strikes the gong to start the performance. As the music starts to play, a door opens on the left side of the circular stage, and an Apostle emerges, followed by the other 11. A larger door in the center opens and the figure of Christ is seen standing with raised hands in greetings to the Apostles.

With one exception, the Apostles bow their heads in reverence as they pass Christ and then disappear through a door on the right. The exception is Judas. Holding a bag of gold, Judas turns away from Christ as he passes.

Subcommittee In Oshkosh to Open Study

Work Represents Next to Last Phase For Citizen Group

OSHKOSH — The next to last phase of work for the Oshkosh Citizens Advisory Planning Committee will get underway this week when the subcommittee for the Capital Improvement program and administration of the plan begins its studies.

The last of the remaining subcommittees, Public Services, makes its report to the Steering Committee Tuesday night. All nine subcommittee reports will then be turned over to the Capital Improvement and Administration Subcommittee which is headed by Leighton Hough.

The various citizen subcommittees have been going over recommendations for city planning made by Harlan Bartholomew and Associates and evaluating these reports in light of citizen reaction.

Hough's subcommittee will take these various reports and make an estimation of cost, how the plan could be financed and a priority listing of all projects. This will then be turned over to the Steering Committee, headed by Henry Kimberly Jr., and C. F. Hyde Jr., for final evaluation. Kimberly said they hope to have this final report by early summer.

Once the Steering Committee is finished with the report, it will be submitted to the City Planning Commission for study and a completed report will then be sent to Harlan Bartholomew and Associates.

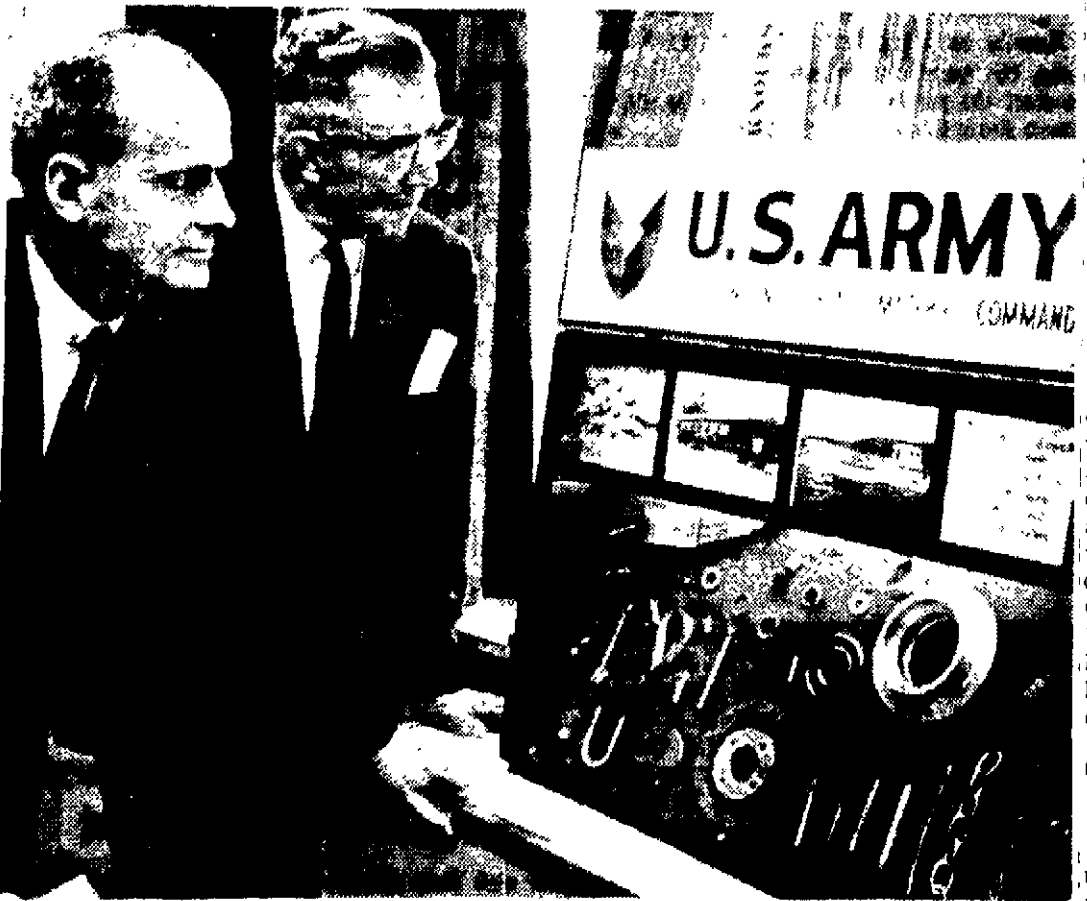

From this a comprehensive plan for the city will be prepared by the professional planners, using their own recommendations and taking into consideration the recommendations of the citizens committee and city planning commission.

With few exceptions, the various subcommittees have been in general agreement with the recommendations of Harlan Bartholomew and Associates.

The proposal of the planners which has run into the most opposition is for a Peninsula Park to be built in Lake Winnebago near the mouth of the Fox River.

The comprehensive plan, when submitted early this fall, will be the culmination of almost two years work on the part of the planning firm and the citizens group.

Appleton Couple Reports on Haiti

Duvallier's daughters, whose guards had been killed while calling for them at the school. Herres brought said he had to step over the back Haitian hills bearing his body of one of the guards in signature.

The Luedtkes stayed at a luxurious hotel which holds 120 guests, but had only six American guests staying there. At night they could hear dogs barking and shots ringing out. The hotel overlooked the gardens of the Dominican Embassy, where political refugees seeking asylum had triggered the explosive situation.

The Appleton couple were in Haiti when Juan Bosch, president of the Dominican Republic, issued his ultimatum to invade Haiti within 24 hours if the refugees were not permitted to leave the country.

Against her uncle's wishes, Mrs. Luedtke carried her camera with her at all times. Because no one else would use it, she and her husband are not on any of the pictures together.

"The people talk in whispers," Mrs. Luedtke said of Haiti. But while there they heard stories of atrocities, of a torture chamber in the palace, of a threat by Duvalier to surround the palace with school children because they "people would not attack children."

Herres asked them to "tell what they saw" when they returned to the United States. Everything is censored and they feel the United States does not know what is going on, Luedtke said. A 10,000 watt radio station from Cuba beams Communist propaganda into the restless nation.

Herres went to Haiti with a U. S. Marine detachment in 1918 and stayed to work at the nationalized bank.

The only white man in the bank, he eventually became manager and his signature appeared on all Haitian money. The Luedtkes brought back Haitian bills bearing his signature.

He once set up a loan for Duvalier, who said he would make him minister of finance if elected president. But when Duvalier resigned six years ago, the bank could hear dogs barking and shots after refusing to reinstate striking employees — Duvalier's back the gardens of the Dominican Embassy, where political refugees seeking asylum had triggered the explosive situation.

On the flight to Haiti the Luedtkes met a news cameraman. They talked to him again at the airport when they left on Tuesday, April 30, taking pictures of the OAS delegation as it arrived. He handed Mrs. Luedtke a box and a newsman embassy sent letters to all Americans living in Haiti, advising them to stock up on food and water and to stay off the streets, pushed away by the guards, the and since has urged them to give these items to a professor from the University of Michigan, also a correspondent, who had not been permitted to leave the plane.

Missionaries, Marines and their families were being evacuated from Haiti the day the Luedtkes left. The couple stopped in Jamaica before returning to Appleton on May 3.

Didn't Relax
"It's a real boiling pot down there," Luedtke said. "I went for a vacation, but I didn't relax for a minute."

But the young couple is determined that next year — "if things are all right" — they will go back, hoping for time actually to see the beautiful country.

Among the souvenirs, native fruits and native art work the Luedtkes brought back from their brief and exciting visit to Haiti are two tourist identification cards. On the back of the cards is the statement, "Happiness awaits for you in Haiti."

When it was all over they stopped at an Appleton drive-in for malts and hamburgers and a pep talk with Jim Choudoir, Appleton disc jockey. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Repair of Apostles Clock Nearly Finished

Oshkosh The Apostles platform was made from a circular saw. This is also true of most of the gears, Hruska thinks. He said it appeared the gears had been circular saw blades with the saw teeth removed and gear teeth filed in. "Everything was hand made, including the electrical switches."

4 Windings
The clock must be wound everyday in four places but of the multitude of movement within the complex time piece, only one thing is controlled by a spring. That is the music box for which the museum has more than 100 different music discs.

Movement of the Apostles and the actual time-keeping elements are controlled by a system of sliding weights, some of which weigh schools will compete in a demonstration contest at the Winneconne School at 8 p.m. Monday, other three windings.

Rewiring the old clock was one of the more delicate tasks. "It is impossible to imagine the condition the insulation was in," Hruska said.

New Wiring
The old lights, of which there were almost 100, were wired in series for 110 volts. If one bulb burned out, all of the lights went out. The new wiring is in parallel for 12 volts. All new switches also had to be made.

All of the Apostles are being given new garments and the faces and hands are being retouched. After the renovation job is completed, the clock will sit at the Wolf River Club at the Wolf River School, Fair and Square Club, the Edward Lemke home, all forming twice hourly for visitors.

Richard Perrin Urban Renewal Troubleshooter

vate instruction. He became a registered architect in 1939 and never realized that 23 years later he would be called upon to be the architect for the "Milwaukee of tomorrow."

Unfortunately, Perrin has had to spend more time cutting through the federal red tape than he thought when he took over as director of Milwaukee's development department. He has been a frequent critic of regional and national urban renewal offices and has repeatedly gone to bat for more federal funds for Milwaukee as well as Wisconsin.

List of Awards
Perrin's long list of citations and awards stretch from 1953 to 1962. He has been honored by cities in foreign countries where he did housing and planning studies, along with receiving state and national recognition.

In 1961, Perrin was accorded a fellowship and membership in the College of Fellows, American Institute of Architects, for contributions in Education and public service.

Probably one of the most versed historians (it's a hobby he works hard at and derives a world of enjoyment, Perrin is a member of the Historic American Buildings Advisory Survey Board of the U.S. Department of Interior, and last year received a meritorious citation from the Milwaukee County Historical Society for contributions to local and state architectural history, and historic building preservation.

Published Writings
Perrin's published writings on housing, slum clearance, urban redevelopment and historical items would more than fill a couple of shelves.

When Perrin comes to Appleton to discuss the facts of life of urban renewal, downtown rejuvenation and other related subjects — he will be speaking straight from the shoulder. Although almost constantly dealing with politicians on the local, state and national levels, Perrin is the last person to give out with the double-talk.

Perrin has gained wide acclaim as an administrator who believes in getting the job done right.

Speaking of the Jet-Age

Fox River Valley Area Airports Have Controversial Histories

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Airports make for interesting conversation pieces throughout the Fox River Valley where people are becoming more air-age conscious than ever before. And, surely you have followed the trials and tribulations of municipalities as they strive to improve their airport facilities to accommodate the smoother and faster jets.

The Fox River Valley has had a controversial and colorful airport history dating back many years. And, it is surprising how history has managed to repeat itself in some instances, involving the same communities.

For example, more than 20 years ago Winnebago County approached Fond du Lac County 1950's, Fond du Lac County made be located between Fond du Lac structure of a new airport with and Oshkosh. The project some-two paved, lighted runways, com-

how got tagged "the million dollar plete with taxi-ways, west of the square mile" by its opponents and city along U.S. 41.

Fond du Lac County turned its back on the proposal — something 1958, the airport was completed

As a result, Outagamie County eventually became a blessing in one of the biggest and best regional- limited at the site.

However, Outagamie County

scored over Fond du Lac in an- other direction by obtaining North

Annual Meeting Of Accountants

The fifth annual membership meeting of the Great Lakes Chapter of the National Society of Accountants for Cooperatives will be held Friday. The meeting will get underway at 9:30 a.m. in the 41 Bowl in Appleton.

Election of new directors and officers will follow the regular business session.

Present officers and directors are G. A. Bailey, president; L. W. Handren, vice president; W. D. Ardelt, secretary - treasurer; Cecil Clancy, director; Archie Thompson, director; and Alex Heimann, director.

Dealo A. Hecker, Internal Revenue Agent, Green Bay, will present current regulations in a speech during the afternoon session.

terminal and tower facilities, in addition to extending runways.

Shortly after the new Fond du Lac County airport started operating, Sheboygan County got into the act and started constructing a Class 3 feeder-line airport at Sheboygan. It is now making a major bid for airline service.

In the late 1950's, the City of Manitowoc decided it was time to make major improvements to its airport which had turfled runways. The runways were lengthened and paved and new lights installed. A terminal was erected and Manitowoc got airline service.

Sheboygan County pressed its request for airline service before the Civil Aeronautics Board, which has had a busy time of it in the Fox Valley region, and there is strong possibility that Sheboygan may pick up some or all of Manitowoc's scheduled airline flights. This has made for an interesting but touchy situation.

Part and parcel of this complicated airport business is the fact there have been occasions, past and present, on which counties and cities vigorously opposed state and federal approval and grants for airports being planned by their neighbors.

Opposition Voiced

For example, when Fond du Lac County was seeking final certification and financial assistance for its project, Winnebago County authorities were unhappy and in-dedicated so.

Recently, when Outagamie County had a hearing on whether it could qualify for state and federal aids for the new jet-age airport, representatives of Winnebago and Brown Counties registered opposition, with an assistance from a Fond du Lac spokesman.

An interesting sidelight to all this airport activity is that Max

Sagunsky, manager of the Outagamie County Airport, and Steve

Wittman, Winnebago County Airport manager, at one time managed the old Fond du Lac airfield. Wittman was there for many years and launched his racing career. He was followed by Sagunsky.

While much has been said and written about the approaching

COB hearings to be held for the purpose of eventually designating regional airports, one angle has been lost in the shuffle.

T. K. Jordan, director of the

sion, told the writer a few years ago that another feeder-line airport might not be too far off.

Young GOP Leader Steers Tax Battle

Wauwatosa's Glen Pommerening Wins Recognition in Finance

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Qualified observers are united in their admiration for the efficient organization of the state assembly this year. One of the reasons why the sometimes unruly lower house of the Wisconsin legislature has drawn favorable attention is the work of a 35 year old, studious, and deliberate politician named Glen E. Pommerening.

As the unquestioned spokesman of the determined Republican majority caucus on the delicate and dominant issue of taxation and finance, Pommerening is the No. 3 man in the ruling wing of the legislature's lower house which this year gives the impression of having more initiative and discipline than the normally more prestigious state senate.

He is a leading partner in a leadership team that is captained from the presiding officer's chair by Speaker Robert Haase of Marinette, and quarterbacked in floor strategy by Assemblyman Paul Alfonsi of Minocqua, majority floorleader.

Pommerening is serving his fifth term in the assembly as the representative of a safely Republican suburban Milwaukee County district made up largely of the city of Wauwatosa.

His rise to rank and power is one of the best proofs of the opportunities in legislative politics for younger men of purpose, enterprise and ambition. He was 25 when he came to the assembly, a "baby" in the legislative politics of that year.

There has been a tendency among Republican legislative majorities to favor and promote the occasional Republican sent to Madison by strongly Democratic Milwaukee County and Pommerening doubtless had some advantage from that habit during his freshman years in the capitol. But his position and his influence today result from hard work, keen intelligence and a devotion to the cause of his party.

He makes no apologies for his conservative views and voting record. But he is also recognized by partisan friend and foe alike as one of the most intelligent exponents of the conservative viewpoint in state finance and he is now the acknowledged Republican expert on the sales tax alternative of the Republicans in the bitter struggle with Gov. John W. Reynolds.

Wins Respect
With a confidence of manner that is sometimes taken for arrogance, a deliberate and positive method of speech that betrays his good educational background, and a seriousness of demeanor that is in contrast to the run of the mill legislative politician, Pommerening is regarded by many of his colleagues with more respect than affection.

Most observers had marked him down for a top leadership role in the legislature two years ago because of his special knowledge of taxation and expenditures. But his aspiration was denied by the men who ruled that session. One of the reasons was his habit of making friends without regard to partisan interests and prejudices. He became a good friend, for example, of David Carley, a prominent Democrat who was then serving in the Democratic administration of former Gov. Nelson.

Some Republican politicians resented their association. But the friendship was characteristic of the man who prefers the intellectual stimulation of an aggressive Democrat to the sometimes uninspiring company of party-line followers of his own persuasion. Moreover, he told a reporter last week, he and Carley had important convictions in common. It was five years ago that Pommerening and Carley, the latter then a staff official of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce, drafted a sales tax bill as a key to Wisconsin state tax revision that has become the basic proposition in the revision movement that has steadily gained adherents since that time.

In much the same way, he says, he has enjoyed a series of public

Map Makers Ready Charts For Astronaut

Cooper to be Helped By Space View of Earth During Orbits

BY JERRY CURRY

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—Project Mercury men who make the astronauts' road maps already are planning for the moon and Mars. But first, they want their accordion-shaped world chart to do its job for astronaut Gordon Cooper on his scheduled 22-orbit flight this month. It will show him where he is, how he got there and where he's going.

The United States Air Force's Aeronautical Chart and Information Center here goes deeply into detail on the maps. It utilizes debates on the merits of the sales tax plan of the Republicans with State Tax Commissioner John Gronouski, the ranking tax and economic expert of the Democratic state administration. Gronouski reciprocates the sentiment, and regards Pommerening as one of the ablest exponents of the Republican cause now involved in state-house politics.

Like some other young politicians, Pommerening has concluded that he cannot afford to continue his legislative career. He will run for congressman in the new Ninth district in southeastern Wisconsin next year, if Gov. Reynolds signs the pending congressional redistricting bill. If the legislation fails, or if he fails to win Republican nomination in a probably crowded field, or the election, he will retire to private law practice with his father.

Pommerening is now chairman of the assembly wing of the legislative finance committee, sharing the gavel of that powerful group with Sen. Walter Hollander of Rosendale.

Exalted Position
It is an exalted place, as state capitol position is measured. Yet a visitor gets the impression that while he enjoys his work, and is resolved to meet his responsibilities, the thrill is less than would be felt by other men of his comparatively youthful age. "Legislative service is not worthwhile without rank," he remarks quietly.

months of high-altitude photography, pinpoints characteristics of the earth's surface, and delves into imaginative devices.

1 to 32 Million
The astronaut map, for example, is similar to battlefield maps GIs used in Korea. But this one reproduces the whole world and can be compactly reduced from its one-yard size into a nine-inch rotating folder which can be handled easily. Its detail is amazing.

Each of the map's four folds can be good for about 7,200 miles—about 20 minutes' flight time. The maps are scaled one over another. Joseph McKinney, Project Mercury's chart manager, said the astronauts' charts are based primarily on shore line and topographical features. Political boundaries are not used. Only those orbital height are marked. The mapmakers try to anticipate everything from the astronaut's orbital view of the earth.

No Doubt
Nothing is left in doubt. Alternate recovery areas are provided on the map for Cooper's flight. They are designed in case of rocket malfunction and clearly illustrate terrain or sea on the spot where he might be forced to land.

"Every fifth orbit, the decision will be made if the flight is to continue," McKinney said of Cooper's mission. "He'll know at all times where he is and, if necessary, where he'll come down."

"If there is a communications failure with the capsule, Cooper can see by his location on the map certain areas where he should attempt to land. This is where we look first," McKinney said.

McKinney said Cooper's 22-orbit space chart allows for one more orbit if it is needed because of unforeseen difficulties.

Now that they've finished the script for Cooper's drama and sent it to the publishers, the space-age cartographers already are working on maps for the nation's next giant steps—conquest of the moon and Mars.

Col. Siebbins W. Griffith, cigar-chewing commander of the chart center, displays on his office wall large charts of Mars, the moon and the world.

"Mars presents a big problem for us and the navigational experts," he said. "The lunar landing also is a problem—but to a lesser degree."

He motioned to the wall map. "Out there in space there is no north, south, east or west. How do you navigate?"

Get Info
To get detailed information for space maps, the chart center has staff members at the Lowell Observatory in Berkeley, Calif. They take photographs and visual notes from observations through 24-inch telescopes.

Other details come from the British University of Manchester's Pic du Midi Observatory in the Pyrenees Mountains in southern France. Exceptionally clear air there permits excellent celestial photography.

State Not Getting Enough U. S. Jobs

Sen. Proxmire Tells Oshkosh How To Win Defense, Space Contracts

OSHKOSH—Sen. William Proxmire told area businessmen Saturday morning they were not getting their fair share of government defense work, space and civilian contracts.

The senator made his comments at a business opportunities conference at the Oshkosh YMCA sponsored by Associated Industries of Oshkosh, Inc., in conjunction with Sen. Proxmire.

Proxmire said the government does about $35 billion in contract business each year, and Wisconsin industries should be getting more of this work. During World War II, he said, the midwest did about 30 per cent for the government. It is much less now, he added, and Wisconsin's share has declined even more.

Tell Procedures
Representatives of various government procurement agencies, including the Army, Navy, Air Force and General Services Office, were present to explain procedures for bidding on government contracts.

Also present were five prime government contractors to give general information on subcontracting and specific information on what subcontracts they now had available.

Proxmire told the local businesses government work was not all "gravy." In fact, he said, it is often harder than doing a private job. A contractor can lose as well as make a good profit.

He warned against trying to use political influence to gain a contract. "I can't help you get a contract," he said. But, he added, if at any time you feel you are discriminated against then go to your senator or congressman.

Subcommittee In Oshkosh to Open Study

Work Represents Next to Last Phase For Citizen Group

OSHKOSH — The next to last phase of work for the Oshkosh Citizens Advisory Planning Committee will get underway this week when the subcommittee for the Capital Improvement program and administration of the plan begins its studies.

The last of the remaining subcommittees, Public Services, makes its report to the Steering Committee Tuesday night. All nine subcommittee reports will then be turned over to the Capital Improvement and Administration Subcommittee which is headed by Leighton Hough.

The various citizen subcommittees have been going over recommendations for city planning made by Harlan Bartholomew and Associates and evaluating these reports in light of citizen reaction. Hough's subcommittee will take these various reports and make an estimation of cost, how the plan could be financed and a priority listing of all projects.

This will then be turned over to the Steering Committee, headed by Henry Kimberly Jr., and C. F. Hyde Jr. for final evaluation. Kimberly said they hope to have this final report by early summer.

Once the Steering Committee is finished with the report, it will be submitted to the City Planning Commission for study and a completed report will then be sent to Harlan Bartholomew and Associates.

Prepare Plan

From this a comprehensive plan for the city will be prepared by the professional planners, using their own recommendations and taking into consideration the recommendations of the citizens committee and city planning commission.

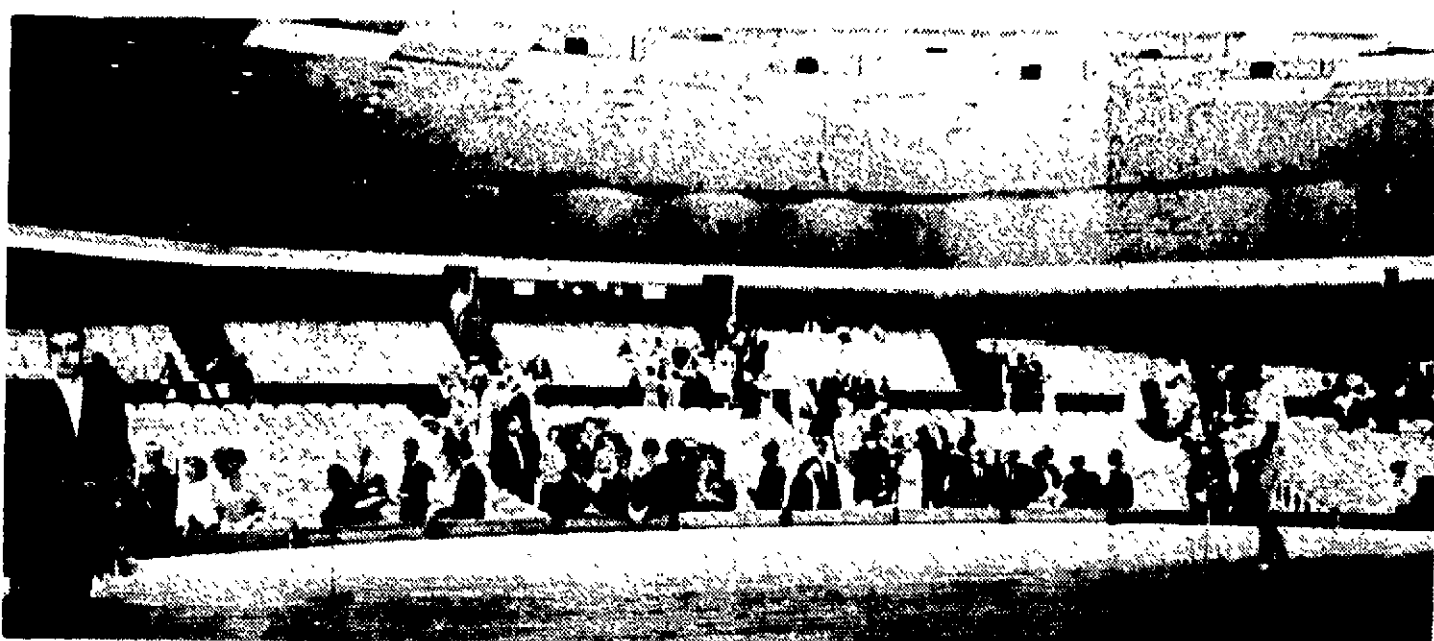

With few exceptions, the various subcommittees have been in general agreement with the recommendations of Harlan Bartholomew and Associates. The proposal of the planners which has run into the most opposition is for a Peninsula Park to be built in Lake Winnebago near the mouth of the Fox River.

The comprehensive plan, when submitted early this fall, will be the culmination of almost two years work on the part of the planning firm and the citizens group.

Beer, Liquor Licenses Queried in Oshkosh

Enforcement Chief Says 10 Permits Invalid Because All Officers Didn't Sign Forms

OSHKOSH — At least nine and possibly ten Oshkosh liquor and fermented malt beverage license holders may be operating illegally.

These businesses may be operating illegally if an opinion submitted by Gordon W. Corry, Chief of Enforcement, State Division of Beverage and Cigarette Taxes, is upheld.

Corry held that the license application of TAX, Inc., for a Class B fermented malt beverage license was invalid because all of the officers of the corporation had not signed forms before the application was acted upon by the common council.

James Kita, corporation vice president, had failed to sign form ABT 2018 prior to council action. However, City Clerk Roger Kliss said Kita had signed a copy of the form which was then misplaced. He failed to sign a new copy in time.

A check of applications on file at city hall from all corporations holding either Liquor or Class B licenses revealed that at least nine firms had not complied with Corry's interpretation of section 176.05 (5) of the state statutes.

Organizations holding licenses that do not comply with this ruling include the Knights of Columbus Club (two officers did not sign forms); American Legion Cook-Fuller Post 70 (one officer did not sign); Eagles Club (one officer did not sign); Elks Club (one officer did not sign);

Hi-Lite Corp.
Hi-Lite Corp. (Alex's Town House — two officers did not sign); South Side Yacht Club (one officer did not sign); Catholic War Veterans (only two officers of the organization are listed);

Shore View Lanes (agent changed and new agent did not sign), and St. Mary Congregation (lists only an agent and a vice president).

If Corry's opinion is enforced, all nine places will have to submit new applications to the council before they can be licensed. Officials of TAX, Inc., will meet Monday with officials of the State Division of Beverage and Cigarette Taxes in an attempt to iron out difficulties. Hibbard Engler, attorney for the corporation, said the decision invalidating TAX's application was made on a minor technicality.

The council is not expected to take action on the license until after clarification of the ruling of the division.

FOND DU LAC — Patrick J. (Pat) Cotter, 53, member of the city police department for the last 26 years and well known in Fox River Valley law enforcement circles, has resigned.

Apostles Clock in Oshkosh Museum Faces Restoration

Exhibit Just Wore Out After 70-Year History

OSHKOSH — The most popular exhibit at the Oshkosh Public Museum will be back on display in about another month when the refurbishing of the famed Apostles Clock is completed.

Most of the work is being done by Robert Hruska, assistant director of the museum and curator of anthropology. "We are completely re-doing the clock from scratch," Hruska said. This includes a complete overhauling of the mechanical works and the finish to the cabinet.

The only outside assistance is a professional to refinish the woodwork. "A clock repairman was not called in because Kitz was not a watchmaker," Hruska said. He was referring to Mathias Kitz, an inventor of wood-working machinery, who devoted six years of his life to building the magnificent time piece from 1892 to 1898.

Wore Out

The clock ran almost perfectly until about a year ago. "It simply wore out," Hruska commented. Most of the clock's action is controlled by strings and the strings rotted. "Now the problem is finding which pulley goes with which lever."

Kitz was an inventive genius and everything, including gears and figurines, were handmade. On every hour and half-hour the ritual of the 12 Apostles passing before Christ is repeated to the background of music.

The figurines, almost a foot tall, are set upon a circular platform in the center of the clock's

'I Like to Work,' Says Busy Jack Benny

BY ISOBEL ASHE

HOLLYWOOD — Americans, for the most part, are sentimental people. They revere traditions like Mom's apple pie and the Fourth of July.

And they are loyal, almost without exception, to those so-called old-timers in show business who have made them laugh over the years.

Of the living legends, less than a handful have remained in the most gruelling of show business mediums, television. Left today are only Bob Hope, Red Skelton and Jack Benny doing regular shows. And of these three, it's a toss-up who works harder, Hope or Benny.

As Jack says, "Bob and I argue who is the bigger ham. We've never resolved it. All I know is that we're agreed on one thing: we'll never retire. I don't think either of us would know what to do with our lives."

Entertainment industry folk gasped when Benny announced a few seasons ago that he would switch from a monthly television show to a weekly series.

"How can he do it at his age?" some asked. "Why does he want to do it?" others pondered. "Why should he do it?" was another question.

Jack's answer was the same to all the queries. "Because I like to work."

The impression should not be gotten from this statement that the blue-eyed comic is a man of only one facet, at loose ends when he isn't poring over a television script.

He golfs almost daily at Beverly Hills' swank Hillcrest Country Club, and any dedicated golfer knows this sport can become a full-time preoccupation.

Modesty Shows

He is an authority on art and artists, and discusses their works with knowledge. He is an exceedingly well-read man and can converse, again with knowledge, on the latest novels and nonfiction books.

And—oh yes—he is a violinist. Of course, he is a master of his profession—comedy.

The line, "Jack Benny couldn't ad lib a belch after a Hungarian dinner" has been variously attributed to the late Fred Allen and Benny's best friend, George Burns.

In any event it is apocryphal, because it isn't true at all. Jack Benny is a very funny man even in conversation with friends.

But he will deny it. His modesty shows all the time.

Getting back to the weekly television show, "I didn't regard it as a challenge," Jack comments. "Actually I was far more nervous when I used to be in radio. When you do a show once a month on television, it's regarded as something rather special and you have to live up to this.

"But every week, well, you don't have time to think whether you've been spectacular. You just keep on working.

One close friend observes: "The man is a workhorse. He was less bored this year and he had more physical ideas for the shows, for publicity value.

"Jack works hard on all these shows, but he still maintains he works a total of only 13 hours a week. I don't believe it! I think he's working all the time, even when he's on the golf course or practicing his violin."

Of course, to Jack practicing the violin isn't work; it's a release. He always has a fiddle with him, not necessarily the Stradivarius he plays with symphony orchestras around the country, but valuable and expensive instruments just the same.

"That's really my escape," Benny says. "If I'm upset or worried about something, I play the violin for an hour or two and I feel better.

"I would like very much to make a violin album. So far, no one's asked me," he grins.

And it is, of course, a source of considerable satisfaction that through his guest appearances with symphonies around the country, he has raised well over $3-million for the various musicians' funds and helped perpetuate their orchestras.

There are those who maintain the Benny scores at these symphonies are purposely written incorrectly so he can make his classic goofs. Not so, insists his violin teacher, Larry Kurkdjie.

Works Hard

"Jack plays to the best of his ability," says Kurkdjie, who is a member of the Benny television show orchestra. "He might have been great, if he had continued after he started as a little boy. But there was a lapse of some 60 years when he didn't play at all, until he resumed.

"And considering this, he does very well," Kurkdjie puts it tactfully.

Currently preparing shows for the 1963-64 season, Benny plans no radical changes in his Tuesday night CBS television format.

He will continue using guest stars, since last year the fan mail coming to his office was highly favorable toward such guests as Jimmy Stewart and his wife, singers Frankie Avalon, Connie Francis and Frank Sinatra Jr., who made his professional debut with Benny.

With termination of his present CBS contract still a year away, workhorse Jack is already making very audible noises about doing a straight play on Broadway. Benny the matinee idol? Who knows?

He put his feet up on his desk and commented, "Besides, I'm too old now to be thrown out of show business. They can let me out, if they want to—thank God, no one's made the offer, yet."

At 69, Jack Benny insists he has no thought of ever retiring from the gruelling grind of his weekly television stint. Which is only one of the reasons the veteran comedian is considered by many as the No. 1 workhorse of the small-screen medium.

Jean Kerr: Broadway's Prettiest Juggler

BY HUGH A. MULLIGAN

LARCHMONT, N.Y. (AP)—When Jean Kerr was turning out $300 magazine articles in the back seat of the 9-year-old family Chevy, parked a few blocks from her houseful of boisterous boys, she never considered herself a serious writer.

"I consider a writer serious when he makes more than $20,000 a year," was the way she put it.

That was five years ago.

Today, two books, two movie sales and a hit play later, Jean Kerr has had to revise her standards upward. Her royalties from the five companies of "Mary, Mary"—one on Broadway (now in its third year), three on the road and one in London—average $20,000 a week. And yet she still approaches her work with the same uncomplicated candor as when she heard MGM had paid $75,000 for the screen rights to her best seller, "Please Don't Eat the Daisies."

"They must be out of their minds," she said.

The venerable Chevy still holds down a place of honor in the Kerr garage, alongside a newer, more expensive vehicle, but its backseat recluse has moved on to larger, more comfortable quarters. Jean Kerr now works in a corner of the bedroom amid a colossal chaos of Coke bottles, cigarette butts and disorderly mounds of manuscript that, as the children know from past experience, constitute the rubble construction site of a new play.

Danger of Fire

"I've got it spread out all over the place up there scene by scene," said the playwright when we called on her last week and found her in the throes of composing the very last scene. "I've rewritten those same four minutes 16 times. Walter keeps saying I'd better hurry up and finish before we have a fire."

Walter, of course, is her husband, Walter Kerr, the distinguished drama critic of the New York Herald Tribune and a noted playwright himself ("Sing Out Sweet Land"), along with being a veteran Broadway director, the author of several books on the theater and the co-author, with his wife, of a hit review ("Touch and Go"), a disaster of a musical ("Goldilocks") and a touching drama ("Song of Bernadette").

He is also living proof that a critic can be loved.

"I wouldn't write a note to the milkman without showing it to him first," says his admiring wife, who reads her work to him page by page and dutifully rewrites at his say so. The habit dates back to their courtship days in Washington, D.C., when he was a drama professor and she a student at Catholic University. Their love survived the "God-awful" he wrote over her first assignment.

Resident Critic

Having a critic of Walter's eminence and withering wit in residence on a permanent consulting basis might not be every writer's idea of a balanced program of mental health. Nor would every critic relish the thought of honing his barbs on a household boxoffice bonanza who can retaliate by cutting off his bank drafts.

No such intramural jealousies ruffle the customary confusion of the Kerr household, where comics and critics abound in all shapes and sizes.

Seventeen-year-old Chris, the oldest of the five Kerr boys, frequently finds himself doubting his mother's words, particularly when they are about him, and 4-year-old Gregory sometimes can be found eating them.

In between, the 13-year-old twins, Colin and Johnny, and 10-year-old Gilbert manfully try to live with their disappointment at not having a basketball star for a father or a former Miss Rheingold for a mother.

"I try to tell them it's not given for product consumption," Mrs. Kerr has attempted to explain away the latter failing.

She also tried to say a few things about her new play, but from the numerous asides, admonitions, threats and exhortations to the twins, who were thumping a basketball in the courtyard, to Gregory, who was stomping on the flower beds and to Walter, who was busy typing in the next room, it was easy to see what she meant when she said, "mostly, I cope."

The conversation went something like this:

"It's called 'Poor Richard' and it's about a poet who's mixed up. Colin, will you button up that jacket? I don't want you out of school again. The title is from . . . Well, you know how people say, 'Poor So-and-So, he's so talented. If only he'd straighten out.' That's Richard. Gregory, will you get off those new shoes?"

"No, I'm not afraid that success will separate me from the everyday experiences of people I write about. A writer makes a mistake in writing to please his sophisticated friends. It wasn't too long ago we were living on a professor's salary of $3,000 a year."

Jean Kerr was born Brigid Jean Collins in Scranton, Pa., the daughter of an Irish immigrant contractor who had a rich resonant baritone, and a County Cork mother of great wit and cultured background who was a second cousin of Eugene O'Neill.

At 8, Jean staked out her life's ambition in a bit of verse:

A Packard car
A Hershey bar
Or a bride in her rich adorning
Dearer than any of these by far
Is to lie in bed in the morning."*

At Scranton's Marywood college, Jean was convinced her height destined her for marriage to a basketball player. Then Walter showed up to witness the school's production of "Romeo and Juliet," for which Jean was stage manager. They met at the dance that weekend. He induced her to take some summer courses at Catholic University, stay on for graduate work and eventually marry the teacher.

Gallantly—or perhaps cowardly, depending on how the offering fares—Walter usually gives way to a substitute reviewer from his paper when a Jean Kerr play is up for consideration. Just the thought of him shooting down one of hers, however, has inspired both a Broadway play and a movie.

For all her success in so many fields, Jean Kerr still hasn't decided whether being a novelist or a playwright is more satisfying. Plays gets her out of town for welcome bouts with room service and a respite from the giddy world of the Kerr-Hilton, as they term the Larchmont demanse.

"But," says Jean, "books in the long run are far more comforting. The impact lasts longer. It's wonderful to see people laugh and clap, but it's nice, too, to get letters from housewives and elderly Jesuits, saying how you saved their sanity years after you've written a piece. With a play, someone is always getting sick out in Chicago with the road company, and flops can be so heartbreaking. Even now, I don't see how I possibly can go through another opening night."

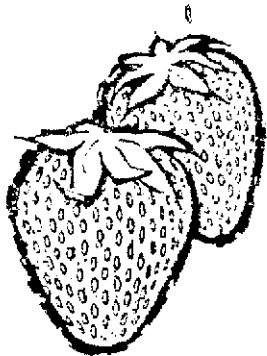

The smart money in Schubert Alley says barbed wire couldn't keep her away when "Poor Richard" comes to town.

'Fractured Flickers'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jay Ward and Bill Scott, two of the town's wackiest producers, have taken silent screen classics, re-edited them, added dialogue and made a film that may make some departed players spin in their graves.

"Fractured" Flickers" will change Lon Chaney's "Hunchback of Notre Dame" to make him a UCLA cheerleader.

"Rudolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand" becomes an insurance salesman and John Barrymore in "Jekyll and Hyde" becomes an advertising agency executive who has discovered a new chocolate drink.

'S-t-r-a-w-berries Ripe...

The cry of the street fruit vendor belongs to the past . . . but his rough melody on a bright warm day is a treasured memory. Perched high on the front board seat of his weatherbeaten, horse-drawn wagon, his raucous sing-song was heard blocks away as he cried, "S-t-r-a-w-berries ripe . . . ripe berries . . . red and ripe . . . s-t-r-a-w-berries!" His iron scales and tin measuring buckets clanked a joyful melody of their own as a sort of counterpoint to the squeaks and noise of the slow, rolling wheels of the wagon against the uneven pavement.

Housewives rushed out at his cry with dishpans and huge kettles to receive the ripe red fruit, fresh from the farmers' market many miles away. These were the fruits they bought for preserving . . . to make jellies and jams . . . with perhaps a scoop or two saved for a supper shortcake or other dessert.

Times have indeed changed since those days, both in the availability of fruits and the recipes to preserve them. Soon, fresh strawberries will be heaped on fruit counters . . . Florida berries already are here and the ripe fruit from Indiana will precede our own seasonal supply about a month away.

So, in preparation for the preserving season, here are some excellent modern recipes for strawberry jelly, jam and a batch of preserves that has a touch of orange.

Strawberry Jelly

3 quarts fully ripe strawberries

(to make 3½ quarts juice)

1 box fruit pectin

5 cups sugar

Few drops red food color (optional)

Prepare berries (wash, cap and crush). Do not heat as in old-fashioned recipes. Place berries in jelly bag and squeeze out the juice. If clearest possible jelly is wanted, re-strain juice through cotton flannel. Measure juice into large kettle (four to six-quart). Add pectin and place kettle over high heat. Stir until mixture reaches a fast bubbling boil; add sugar and bring back to a fast rolling boil. Keep stirring while mixture boils exactly one minute. Remove from heat; stir in few drops of red coloring to help prevent fading. Quickly skim off foam and pour boiling hot jelly in five or six one-half pint tapered fruit jars that have been sterilized. Fill each jar to within one-eighth inch of top of jar. Put dome lid on each jar; screw band tightly. Invert jars two or three minutes, then stand them upright to cool.

Strawberry Jam

(With added pectin)

5 cups crushed strawberries

1 box powdered fruit pectin

7 cups sugar

Crush and measure berries after washing, draining and capping them. Place in four to six-quart kettle. Add pectin and put kettle over high heat. Stir until mixture reaches a fast bubbling boil. Add sugar and bring mixture to a fast rolling boil. Keep stirring while mixture boils exactly one minute. Remove from heat. Quickly skim off foam and pour boiling hot jam into eight or nine half-pint, sterilized fruit jars. Pour to within one-eighth inch of top of each jar. Put dome lid on jar; screw band tightly. Invert jars two or three minutes, then stand upright to cool.

Strawberry Jam

(Without added pectin)

4 cups crushed strawberries

4 cups sugar

2 tablespoons lemon juice

¼ teaspoon salt

Measure berries, sugar, lemon juice and salt into kettle. Stir well. Heat slowly until sugar dissolves, then boil rapidly until mixture thickens or to about 221 degrees F. Quickly skim off foam. Pour boiling hot into prepared jars to within one-eighth inch of top of each jar. This recipe will make four one-half pints or two pints of jam. Put dome lids on jars; screw band tightly. Invert jars two or three minutes, then stand upright to cool.

Strawberry Preserves

6 cups prepared berries

4½ cups sugar

¼ teaspoon salt

½ small tart orange

Wash, drain, cap and measure strawberries. Mix berries and sugar. This is done best by putting alternate layers of berries and sugar in a wide bowl and then, using a rubber spatula, gently lift and turn berries in sugar. Cover bowl and leave in refrigerator at least eight hours.

Peel off and discard thin yellow part of orange rind; slice rest of orange. Turn sugared berries into kettle; add salt and sliced orange. Put kettle over low heat and keep there until sugar dissolves and berries are heated through. Then boil rapidly to 221 degrees F. At this point berries should appear bright and clear and the syrup about the consistency of warm honey. Remove orange slices.

Quickly skim off foam; pour boiling hot preserves into four half-pint or two pint jars that have been sterilized. Pour to within one-eighth inch of top of each jar. Put down lid on each jar; screw bands tightly.

Fox Valley Dog Owners Awarded Championship Points at Shows

The consensus among the participants in the recent conformation classes seems to be quite consistently that they improved both their understanding of procedure and techniques of handling. There was a very nice local entry at both the Green Bay and Sheboygan shows.

Here is a fairly comprehensive resume of these entries and their wins. If we unwittingly passed someone over, do forgive the oversight, and make doubly sure in the future by sending your information directly to us.

Packerland Club

At Green Bay, April 27, the Packerland Kennel Club held its first annual point show in the Brown County Arena, and on April 28, the Sheboygan Kennel Club put on its ninth annual show.

Leading the list of those who put on the coveted points toward an AKC championship is Mrs. Leonard Shilobrit, Route 1, Neenah, with her black and tan cocker spaniel bitch, who went Reserve Winners on Saturday and on Sunday was Winners and Best of Opposite Sex to Best of Variety.

Another winner of points was the smooth dachshund bitch, owned by Mrs. Mike Schultz, Route 1, Neenah, who was Winners and Best of Opposite Sex to Best of Variety on Sunday.

Mrs. Louise Clarke of Ripon is also on her way to the title with her longhaired dachshund dog who, on Saturday, was Best of Variety and on Sunday Best of Opposite Sex to the Variety.

Winning two championship points with their Labrador retriever were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burch of Neenah. Their dog went Best of Winners from the Open Class.

Wins Ribbons

Mrs. Louis Cain, also of Ripon, showed her Champion Samoyed bitch, Frostar's Tundra Star Frost to Best of Breed at the Sheboygan show.

Also coming home with ribbons was Mrs. William Pryor of Neenah. Her black cocker spaniel went first in the American bred class and on to Reserve Winners. Mrs. Pryor's black and tan cocker male was second in the Open Class and on to Reserve Winners.

Mrs. Mary Vanderwalker, Neenah, entered a Collie puppy that won a first in the Puppy Class, and Miss Carole Warner, Appleton, won first in the American Bred Class with her male Collie.

Mrs. William Wruck of Neenah went second in the Open class with her Standard Poodle at Green Bay, and at Sheboygan won her class and went on to Reserve winners.

Mrs. John Bengtson, of Oshkosh, showed her new parti-colored cocker spaniel and won her class both days and went to Reserve Winners at Green Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Kuhns of Hortonville, won the American Bred class with their smooth dachshund bitch and then took the Reserve Winners ribbon at Green Bay.

Booster Shot

A German Wirehaired Pointer, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Liebl of Neenah, won first place in his puppy class.

Those of you who may plan a rather extensive tour of the forthcoming Spring and Summer shows would do well to bear a few of these precautions in mind. If your dog is under 18 months, or if you have other young dogs, pups, or nursing bitches in direct contact with him at home, it might be wise to give him a booster shot before showing. Take your own food and water pans along and never use those used by some other dog. Never borrow or use someone else's grooming equipment.

If possible take him outside to relieve himself;

if inside pens are required, make his visits brief and to the point. Keep him in your car or crate as much of the time as you can.

Cavalcade Planned

Fresh from its machinations with the recent conformation classes, the Winnegamie Dog Club plans to sponsor an "All-Breed Dog Cavalcade," July 4, at Pierce Park, Appleton. The date and location offer probable obstacles: the dogs are apt to be emotionally unstable from the Fourth of July crackers and other explosives; the long-haired dogs will tend to be out of coat, and the probable heat will make the short-haired breeds susceptible to heat prostration; but we are sure that this Club will handle their problems with their customary perspicacity and its success will equal its previous standards.

'Tin Drum' Is Acute Political Allegory

New German Novel Causes Sensation

The Tin Drum. By Gunter Grass. Translated by Ralph Mannheim (Pantheon, $6.95).

In teutonic mythology the dwarf is a personage both evil and benign. He lives in a dark underground kingdom, emerging from time to time on earth to intervene maliciously in men's lives, yet he is at the same time our good guardian of gold and silver, skilled in metal-working. He is a prankster, a fool, a dreaded sage. He began with Hephaestus, reached his greatness in Alberich, and was undoubtedly an influence on the Pied Piper, Tyll Eulenspiegel, Parzival, Caliban and Ariel, Baron Munchausen, Zwerg Nase, Rigoletto, Rumpelstilzchen and Tom Thumb.

Today he lives in the West German Federal Republic and his name is Oskar Matzerath.

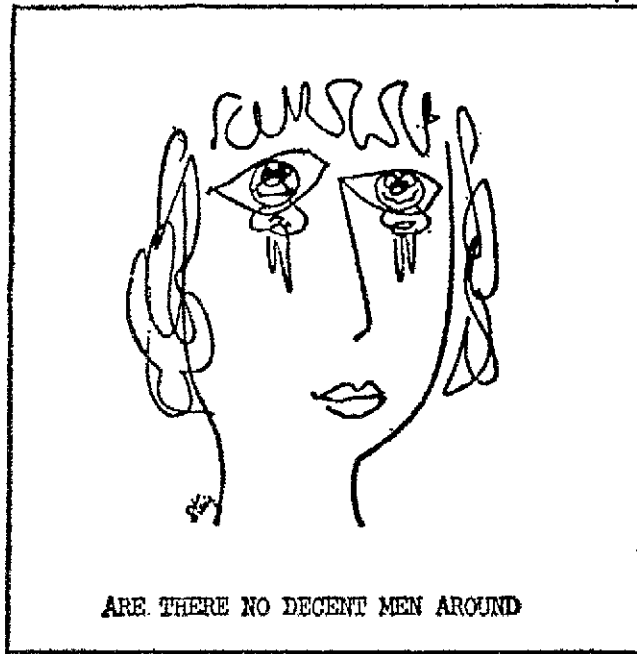

Oskar was born in 1925 in Danzig, a city which has been repeatedly contested by (among others) Poles, Prussians, Pomeranians, Swedes, Goths and Finns. Oskar is, as he says, "clairaudient"; he is born with a fully developed mentality. As he lies in his cradle he hears his father, a grocer, saying that the boy will someday help in the shop. His mother, with unwitting opposition, remarks that on his third birthday Oskar will have a tin drum.

Artist at Heart

The boy opts for his mother, of course, being an artist at heart and having no affection whatever for potato chips and margarine. When he gets his drum, he immediately becomes an expert drummer, putting his whole consciousness into it. He lives by his drum, he becomes the pure artist of the drum. He also decides to stop growing, to remain an outward three-year-old forever. This he accomplishes by an act of will, but he fakes a tumble down the cellar stairs on his head in order to lend credibility to his decision.

From then on Oskar's adventures come so thick and fast that no no synopsis is possible. Predictably he caused his father's death, unfortunately he also causes his mother's death, his mother's lover's death, and a number of other deaths and—it seems necessary to add—births.

During the 1930's he disrupts Nazi rallies by hiding under the rostrum and drumming in waltz time while the band is playing marches. During the war

"Are there no decent men around?" asks this wistful female in "Continuous Performance," William Steig's latest collection of cartoons. The book was published last week by Duell, Sloan and Pearce. Steig's work appears regularly in The New Yorker.

he becomes chief of a juvenile gang which preys on both Nazis and partisans. After the war he emigrates to West Germany, permits himself to grow a few more inches, becomes a humpback, a stonecutter, an artist's model, a wildly successful entertainer. He ends in a mental hospital, convicted of a murder he has not done.

German Sensation

"The Tin Drum" has caused a sensation in West Germany. For good reason: in part the book is an acute political allegory, and without doubt Oskar Matzerath exposes German guilt and delusion more painfully than anyone else, fictional or real, in the years since 1945. But politics is not the only butt of Oskar's satire. Religion and science are ridiculed too, and the pretensions of art make a continuing theme—remember that Gunter Grass, Oskar's inventor, was a successful painter and sculptor before he became a novelist.

Finally, the book is a splendid comedy, full of laughter. But readers with weak stomachs should take warning that it contains several passages calculated to turn strong men green.

Hayden Carruth

Authors Rock 'Cradles of Eminence'

Cradles of Eminence. By Victor and Mildred C. Goertzel. Little, Brown, $5.95.

It is a matter of common observation that "a lot of people" who became famous as writers, inventors, actors, artists, statesmen, scientists, etc., reached prominence despite family problems, school troubles, physical handicaps or other distracting influences.

In fact it has become something of a cliché in these times that any given "genius" probably has sprung from some odd misadventure of heredity or environment, or both.

Sifts Complications

This book goes a bit beyond these offhand observations to explore the background of 413 contemporary individuals, through their biographies or autobiographies. They were chosen rather arbitrarily on the basis of their newsworthiness—each had been the subject of at least two books in a typical library. The word "eminence" in the title has good and bad connotations, for Hitler, Goebbels, Stalin and such ilk are among them.

The pattern of this book is to sift out from the biographies such factors as home life, parental influences, school experience and physical or emotional complications.

For the general reader, this book is an interesting journey among famous or infamous people—interesting because it details many gossip facts about these individuals. But the reader needs to bear in mind that the authors use many of the verbal trappings of psychology, sociology and education, which the layman may view with a queasy eye, having grown disillusioned with academic writers who suggest timidly, in cautious phrases, that up is up and that children are smaller than adults.

'Lawrence Omnibus'

"Lawrence Omnibus" to be broadcast at 9 p.m. today over WLFM, will highlight Dr. Douglas Knight's tenure as president of Lawrence College.

The program marks the finale to this year's broadcasting activities at WLFM.

The station is leaving the air earlier than usual since the building housing the transmitter is being demolished to make way for a new science hall.

'Fall of Dynasties' Has Great Vitality

The Fall of the Dynasties. By Edmund Taylor. Doubleday, $6.50.

Taylor has undertaken a tremendously broad panorama of recent history. For readers who have hardihood to follow him through the sprawling mountains and dark valley of this long, jarring adventure there is a considerable reward in understanding frightening legacies which this generation has inherited.

This book also may give the serious reader creeps. There is such a monumental grisliness about the morbid insanities and fumbling follies of recent European history, spread out in gigantic heaps of detail on these pages, that the groggy spectator may conclude that it is a wonder we have managed to stagger along into the era of nuclear crisis.

Taylor's subtitle is "The Collapse of the Old Order 1905-1922." The dynasties whose downfall he relates are the Hapsburg (Austria-Hungary), Ottoman (Turkey), Romanov (Russia) and Hohenzollern (German).

Essentially, this is a grimly repetitious tale of decrepit despots, living in utterly blind ignorance of the realities, and coming to bloody and chaotic ends by piling blunder upon stupid blunder, at the cost of millions of nameless lives.

American readers, with rather hazy notions about the stewpot of European nationalist and racial tanglements, and with only a small grasp of the agonies and hatreds that spilled over from World War I to World War II, doubtless will be shocked by they wade through these narratives of war, riots, revolutions, degeneracy and psychopathic aberrations in high places.

Blueprint for Mankind

The Genetic Code. By Isaac Asimov. Orion. $3.95.

The Exploration of Outer Space. By Sir Bernard Levell. Harper & Row. $3.

In the general picture scientists have formed about the origin of life, there is postulated a mixing of simple chemicals in the primeval atmosphere. These ultimately led to four types of complex molecules — thymine, adenine, cytosine and guanine — which developed the capacity to reproduce themselves, first as single-celled organisms and later, through natural selection, into complex life forms.

The four molecules, symbolized by the letters, T, A, C, and G, are now known to be the bases of DNA, life's genetic material. They are the four letters of the alphabet of life.

Currently, the most exciting quest in biology is determining the various ways the four letters combine to blueprint what we are and what the next generation will be.

Master Plan

Isaac Asimov sets the background for that quest in a lucid explanation of "The Genetic Code." No background in science is needed to follow his step-by-step unfolding of nature's master plan that makes dogs different from fish and elephants from house flies.

Asimov sticks to pure exposition until the last chapter, when he permits himself the luxury of speculating on what cracking the genetic code might mean.

It is conceivable that science could encourage the stump of an amputated leg to grow, to put together embryonic cells to produce a new heart, to cancel out the inherited tendency toward cancer. It may even be possible to work out the genetic combination in embryo to produce a person of lofty intelligence or artistic creativity.

In other words, instead of permitting molecular and biological evolution to develop freely as it has over the last two billion years, man may have one day the power to direct evolution to his own desires.

The moral and theological implications of that potential the author leaves to others.

If life arose under a set of circumstances that existed on Earth, are there other planets where the same kind of primeval chemicals might give rise to life elsewhere?

Life Not Unique

Sir Bernard Levell is among those who believes life on Earth is not unique. He calculates there may be 100 million stars in our Milky Way galaxy alone and a billion galaxies where planets exist with life-producing possibilities.

Sir Bernard is widely known as the director of the Jodrell Bank Experiment Station and professor of radio astronomy at the University of Manchester. He makes the stirring conjecture that interstellar communication with intelligent life could come through radio astronomy.

These two small volumes, one directed toward the outer space of cosmology and the other toward inner space deep within the cell, support the concept of an orderly universe governed by physical laws.

More Adventures Of Elsa's Clan

Forever Free. By Joy Adamson. Harcourt, Brace & World. $5.95.

The last volume in a trilogy about Elsa, the lioness, who enjoyed world fame and affection. The author's first book, "Born Free," introduced Elsa to millions of readers, who developed a personal interest in this quicqually animal. In "Living Free" her adventures were continued, including the arrival of her three cub affectionate Jaspah, aggressive Gopa, and shy Little Elsa.

In "Forever Free" the author completes the story. Elsa and her cubs have been living on a reserve for two and one-half years in apparent harmony with the natives, when suddenly the Adamsons received an order from the African District Council ordering them to remove the lions from the reserve because they might become a danger. Stunned, because the local authorities themselves had helped to choose the area for the lions' release, the Adamsons wrote to friends, searching for a good territory for Elsa and her cubs.

Freed in Preserve

Eventually it was decided to release them in the Serengeti national park, a 5400 mile square preserve, filled with gazelle, wildebeest, zebra, buffalo, elephant, rhino, lion and countless smaller animals.

Efforts to capture and relocate the cubs were handicapped by the unexpected death of Elsa (mourned throughout the world). Repeated obstacles arise and are surmounted as the cubs are trapped and transported to the Serengeti. The Adamsons' efforts to see that Elsa's cubs survive in this colder climate and strange ecology meet head-on with bureaucratic regulations.

The young lions, now 17 months old and still dependent, would normally have their mother's help to feed and train them until they were able to fend for themselves; the Adamsons were forced to leave the young lions to their own resources.

The reader will join in a memorable experience that catches the spirit of its environment. It is also the story of human devotion and valor.

Fiedler Casts 'Second Stone'

The Second Stone. By Leslie A. Fiedler. Stein and Day. $5.95.

What would Holden Caulfield be like today? Fifteen years have passed since teen-age Holden, bristling with love and anger in "The Catcher in the Rye," wondered where the ducks of Central Park go when winter comes.

Holden has grown older, wiser, a bit sour, still intensely human, in the figure of a new hero who has assumed flesh and bone in recent American fiction.

This hero—amoral, foot-loose, a loser, but capable of deep feelings, wit and love—appears as the daffy cowboy in Nelson Algren's "A Walk on the Wild Side," and foul-mouthed but ebullient American law student loose in Dublin in J. V. Donlevy's "The Ginger Man," the gawky, engaging shoe salesman in John Updike's "Rabbit, Run," and now as the homely expatriate down on his luck in Leslie A. Fiedler's "The Second Stone."

New Hero

This new hero tells a cockeyed lance at those windmills of American success and masculinity: Playboy's lantern-jawed young executive, Babbitt Jr., with sophistication, and Hemingway's Boy Scout, all muscle, romanticism and appetite for dangerous fun and games. Holden, at 35, is the opposite of everything about these cartoons.

The hero in Fiedler's novel, for example—the setting is Rome in the 1950s—Clem Stone, 35, drunk, broke, honest, very funny, likable, unable to finish his war novel, abandoned by wife and daughter, meets and instantly falls in love with the pregnant wife of his boyhood chum, now a successful progressive rabbi back in the States. She digs him, too.

Everything about and surrounding their love, however, smacks of The Absurd. No explanation is given for the affair which neurotically flares and sputters out within three days or why Clem suddenly decides to return home to middleclass purgatory in Cleveland.

Yet the love between Clem and Hilda, four months pregnant, a waif yet solid, a good American hausfrau yet one whose intuitions are frequently magical, lovely, deep as a dream before dawn—is genuine and touching. Their love sings on the page.

Theater of Absurd

Surrounding it is a set designed for the Theater of the Absurd. Dominating the stage is the First International Conference on Love organized by Clem's old friend, the Rev. Mark Stone, "the spokesman for a return to religion without a commitment to God."

Genuine feeling and burlesque mingle to make "The Second Stone" worth reading. And even if the book tends at times to the literary and contrived, it thrives with the stuff of life and has that kind of energy found in Fiedler's superb short story "Nude Crequet" (published in his 1961 collection "Pull Down Vanity").

Coins

Token Currency Widely Used

BY E. ROCHETTE
Editor, Numismatic News

Although token currency is not an unfamiliar sight in communities outside of Wisconsin, this particular type of substitute money saw wide use in the state's villages and towns around the turn of the century.

An example of this can be found in the little village of Iola where several different issues of many denominations have been found.

Business Stimulant

Periods of recession in our country's economy are usually felt first in the farm communities; some recessions occur solely in the agricultural regions. It was in one such depressed period, early in 1900, that the Iola Farm Co-Operative introduced the first "due bills" in this town.

These due bills were a perfect substitute for the money that the local townsfolk did not have. They served as a good business stimulant.

The Iola Co-Operative issued a series of brass tokens that were used to pay for produce grown and raised locally, mainly butter and eggs. These tokens could then be redeemed for any merchandise for sale at the co-operative and at any time. This way the farmer found a market for his surplus and the merchant found a customer for his merchandise.

Soon the other stores in town followed suit. Each merchant strove to make his tokens more easily recognizable than those of his competitor, for they were not interchangeable. This accounts for the many different shapes, sizes and values of the "coins."

Within a year, all four of the general merchandise firms in Iola issued butter and egg money.

These tokens saw actual circulation for about a 10 to 15-year period immediately prior to World War I. Customers themselves forced an end to this money when in the prosperous days following the war, they preferred and insisted on receiving cash for their produce.

Uranium Awaits State Prospector

BY GEORGE FRIEDRICH

A Wisconsin prospector—either in earnest or following a healthy, exciting outdoor hobby—is working in a section of the Canadian Shield, the richest mineral zone in the world. Crystalline deposits in coarse, dike-like, pegmatite veins can provide the rock hound, if he is lucky, with emeralds, opals and rare space age minerals.

Fine-grained veins usually in granite outcroppings can provide the prospector with such metallic minerals as gold, silver, molybdenite and uranium.

A vein is an ore body that extends for great lengths and depths, but little width. They are usually the richest source of minerals.

While the pegmatite vein was formed by cooling waters and gases squeezed into fissures of cooling rock masses creating slower cooling crystals, finer grained veins were formed after the rock masses had cooled.

Rocks Cool

After the high temperature rock elements had cooled and separated, there remained considerable water rich solutions of dissolved metals, sulphur and silicon and other elements. Under great pressure these liquids moved through the fissures, melting the walls and mingling the elements of the rock mass with themselves to form other minerals.

These veins formed at great depths. Glacial action exposed them to the modern prospector, but often this exposed clue is only an inch or two wide while the vein swells to several feet in as many feet of depth.

The Little Wolf Mining and Mineral Co.'s uranium deposit at Big Falls is such an example. The veins were only a few inches wide on the surface, but at 31 feet depth they were 16 feet in width.

These vein deposits will be found in granite outcrops, not in sandstone. Deposits in sandstone are "laid down" rather than injected under tremendous pressure. Few sandstone areas are found in the Canadian Shield.

A prospector seeking to check-out a uranium deposit needs a Gieger counter.

Golden Flakes

Gold is found in quartz along with silver, so gold covered flakes in quartz are legitimate reasons for excitement. Black or gray flakes can indicate silver since silver will tarnish while gold will not.

Gray flakes or metallic streaks could be molybdenite.

One of the chief rules of thumb for a prospector depends on the weight of a rock. Any rock that is extremely heavy or light in the hand is a suspicious one. It should be taken home to be checked further.

Even if a vein may be small, it may lead to an "ore shoot" that will be rich in minerals. If a prospector finds one vein he should look for several more running parallel with it. Veins always occur in sets. In our uranium deposit we have 61 veins in 97 feet.

Uncle Jack's Garden Diary

BY UNCLE JACK

At first I felt a little envy as I noted the hectic activity in the yard of my new neighbor across the street. He was, apparently, a man of sufficient means, to hire a professional landscaping crew to plant his shrubs and prepare the seed bed for his extensive lawn.

There were a dozen husky young men, who had ample resources in the way of a couple of tractors equipped with scrapers and shovels, tillers, seeders and half a dozen other gadgets that have been invented since I put in my own lawn.

It was an impressive performance. What was an unkempt yard in the morning was a gently undulating expanse of freshly seeded and planted lawn by sundown, carefully covered with a light mat of clean straw which will shade the grass seedlings while they get their start during the next month. The owner of the place contributed nothing; he stood around for the most part.

Envy Passes

But the envy passed to a kind of sympathy as the hours passed and this newcomer to my neighborhood didn't seem to be enjoying himself as much as I think I did when I faced the challenge of building a fresh lawn.

I borrowed the old-fashioned scheme of a bee, not especially because I preferred it, but because it was a matter of economic necessity. I called a couple of dozens of my business friends, most of them in sedentary occupations, and invited them to my home on a Saturday with the announcement that there would be a useful diversion that would provide exercise and enjoyment too, ordered a couple of cases of beer and the makings for half a hundred bratwurst sandwiches, borrowed wheelbarrows, shovels, rakes and other tools, and hoped for the response.

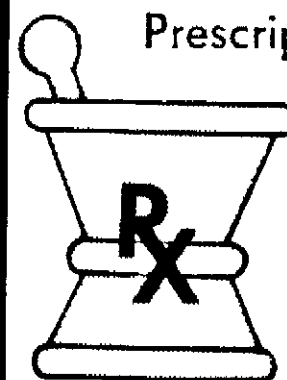

Enjoyable Time

It was good, unexpectedly good. As I remember it today, only a few invitations failed of a response, and for acceptable excuses. In eight hours or so we graded and raked the lawn to a state of perfection that even inferior grass seed could not resist, and had an enjoyable time in the bargain.

Since that time a dozen of my friends who survive in my neighborhood have never failed to examine the yard with special interest when they call. They have a kind of author's pride in the result. Several of them have borrowed my scheme and have organized lawn-making bees of their own when they have bought or built new homes in undeveloped neighborhoods. Once or twice I have observed one of these helpers lecturing with some confidence about the techniques of successful lawn culture. He knows. He worked on mine on that lovely spring day long ago.

Britain's Try At Budgetary Deficit Helps

Macmillan Reaps
Popularity Boom
By Spending Money

BY JOHN GALE
LONDON (AP) — Britain's cautious advance into economic expansion through more deficit spending appears to be paying off with a modest boom in popularity for Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government.

The national budget of five weeks ago has pumped spending power into the British economy. Public opinion polls record a slight upswing in the fortunes of the prime minister and his ruling Conservative party—although all are agreed that Macmillan would lose a national election called right now.

Stock markets have been cheerful, the pound has been stable in world markets and unemployment figures have slumped. There are optimistic government predictions for an improvement in exports and consumer demand at home.

Buoyant View
Taking a buoyant view of the trends, Macmillan recently declared: "The sun is beginning to shine again. Britain is on the move."

His analysis was greeted with derision by Laborites. They assert that British economy policy is being conducted in fits and starts, that too little has been done to get industry booming and that the British welfare state is slowly being whittled away.

The British budgetary deficit this year runs to 687 million pounds—$1.92 billion—mainly because the treasury is handing the public an estimated total of 592 million pounds—$1.66 billion—in tax concessions. This calculated deficit runs a good deal higher than for several years.

Build Record
The Conservatives have been in office 12 years. By law, Macmillan must call a national election by October 1964. Clearly he wants to do so on a record of economic expansion. Virtually every measure in the national budget unveiled in April by the chancellor of the exchequer, Reginald Maudling, aimed at this.

Maudling put more money in the pocket of the man in the street, increased cash incentives for industry to settle in areas of heavy unemployment, and generally boosted tax-free allowances over the whole range of new industrial building.

Many British authorities expected the chancellor to go further—but he obviously had in mind the $225 million he already had given away by slashing the sales tax on automobiles and other items from 45 to 25 per cent.

Hike Increases
These measures are intended to help Britain strike an annual productivity increase of 4 per cent. Last year the figure was 2 per cent.

Translated in terms of the American economy—about seven times the size of Britain's—the tax concessions worked out slightly higher than the $10-billion three-year tax reduction plan sent to Congress by President Kennedy last January.

The deficit was estimated to be equivalent to a U.S. cash deficit of about $13.5 billion.

New York Rule

Peps Up Game

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

"What's the advantage," I was asked in Los Angeles just the other day, "of playing Chicago with New York rules?"

It sounds like a weird game of geography, but it really belongs in this space. Chicago may sound like a city to you, but it's also a way of playing bridge.

In normal bridge, a rubber may end in two hands or may go on for twenty or thirty hands. It may last ten minutes or more than an hour.

When you have only four players you seldom care how long a rubber takes. Nobody is on the sidelines waiting for his chance to get back into action. Even so, however, an excessively long rubber may be a nuisance. If you want to end the game at midnight and start the last rubber a few minutes before the witching hour, you're not overjoyed to find yourselves still struggling at one o'clock.

Vulnerability Changes

In the game of Chicago, each rubber consists of exactly four hands. There are no very short or very long rubbers. If you have a fifth player, he stays out for only twenty minutes or so. If you start your last rubber close to your preferred finishing time you can predict within a minute or two just when you will be able to get up from the table.

In the original form of Chicago, the vulnerability changes during the four deals. On the first hand neither side is vulnerable; second and third hand, the dealer's side is vulnerable; fourth hand, both sides vulnerable.

The New York rule, first adopted at the Cavenish Club, applies only to the second and third deals: the non-dealer's side is vulnerable.

There are two advantages to playing the New York rule. If the first two players pass, the third player is non-vulnerable against vulnerable opponents and can afford to make a fancy bid of some kind. This peps up the game. According to the original rule,

South dealer North-South vulnerable
♥ A J 10 6
♦ A 5
♣ K 9 4 3
WEST

♦ 10 4 3

♦ K 9 6 2
♣ A 5
South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	6 ♥	All Pass
Opening lead — ♠ J

the third player is vulnerable against non-vulnerable opponents and cannot afford to get too gay.

If the first three players pass, the fourth player under New York rules is vulnerable against non-vulnerable opponents. He tends to pass a doubtful hand, and a more exciting hand may develop in the redeal. Under the original rule, the fourth player is not vulnerable against vulnerable opponents and tends to open a doubtful hand to avoid a redeal.

Count Your Winners

Both rules will probably be given when official rules are issued for Four Deal Bridge. Thoughtful players will probably try the New York method sooner or later. If they do, they'll never go back to the original form of the game.

Most of us get into the habit of counting losers at a trump contract, but this is a short cut that sometimes leads you astray. You have to count the tricks that you will win if you want to be sure of winding up with a plus score.

When today's hand was played, South counted his losers: one in spades, none in trumps, none in diamonds, and none in clubs. The slam was ice-cold, so South won the spade trick and drew three rounds of trumps.

Then there were only eleven tricks. South had one trump in his own hand and one trump in the dummy. His own trump was not enough to ruff out both of dummy's club losers; and dummy's trump was not enough to ruff out South's two diamond losers.

The hand is easy to play if you count winners. You have exactly two tricks in each of the side suits. You therefore need six trump tricks to make the slam.

There are three ways to make six trump tricks. You can ruff two clubs in the South hand and use North's trumps to draw trumps. You can ruff two diamonds in dummy and use your own trumps to draw trumps. Or you can cross-ruff.

The one thing you cannot afford to do is draw trumps.

It's reasonable enough to count your losers in routine trump contracts. If you plan to do some ruffing in both hands or if you plan to do some ruffing in the hand that is long in trumps—count your winners.

Don't Shut Your Mind to Birmingham

From this far away, the Negro rioting in Birmingham, Alabama, is both nauseous and puzzling.

It is nauseous because down deep most of us have come to believe this cannot happen in the United States. It is puzzling because on the surface there appears no justifying reason for the mass protests and because there appears to be no real solution to the problem.

Obviously the causes go back many years. As Eric Sevareid remarks in an adjoining column, the Negro Passion, as he calls it, is a true people's revolution.

It is significant though that this is occurring in Alabama. That state and Mississippi, where the last violent outbreak occurred, are the most backward in the nation in their handling of the racial problem.

These are the states which have consistently elected governors and legislators who shout and scream the doctrines of White Supremacy, defy the federal govern-

Boom for Byrnes

Politics is an uncertain business at best and we rather imagine that Congressman John Byrnes is undergoing mixed feelings over the suggestion that he become a "favorite son" candidate for president in 1964 or be open for the vice presidential nomination.

A boom for one of the top spots in the nation is heady indeed. Mr. Byrnes certainly deserves both the honor and the encouragement to aspire to higher government service. He is one of the most intelligent, sound-thinking and experienced members of the United States Congress in both houses and either party.

But it is a well-known opinion, if not acknowledged by Republicans officially, that 1964 at this point does not look like a shoo-in for whomever opposes President Kennedy. There can be upsets and in the past we have felt sometimes that Republicans lost because they didn't have the courage to put up men with imagination and "vigor" or to back them fully. The sad case of the loss of a senate seat illustrated the state organization's vacillation, first in

A Structure for Regional Action

A bill with possible far-reaching benefits for the Fox River Valley and other metropolitan areas active in regional planning has been introduced in the legislature. It would permit an association of adjoining communities to provide services on an area-wide basis.

The measure has been introduced in the Senate by the Committee on Labor, Taxation, Insurance and Banking and is now awaiting a hearing.

The legislation had its inception in this area. The immediate catalyst was the developing idea of public purchase of part of Siroebe Island for a recreational facility. A committee of the Fox Valley Regional Planning Commission working on that project thought it could best be accomplished through participation of a number of municipalities in this area.

The idea for legislation to make this possible was then discussed with the executive committee and later the entire membership of the regional planning commission. It became immediately obvious that such a structure could also accomplish many other purposes of the regional planning commission, and the concept of the legislation was broadened to achieve this end.

The guiding hand behind the legislation was Gordon Bubolz, whose previous experience as a state senator served him in good stead in drafting the legislation and steering it to introduction in the Senate.

Adoption of such legislation would open new avenues for cooperative participation

BOGSAT Is Abolished

Ever hear of BOGSAT?

Yes, it is a federal agency, albeit a rather informal one. It stands for "Bunch of Guys Sitting Around a Table."

BOGSAT was in the news recently. It seems this is the method the federal government used until recently to recruit top officials for the national establishment. A bunch of White House guys sat around a table thinking up names of people who might be prospects for federal appointments.

The Kennedy administration is trying to systematize the head-hunting business. The President's staff has developed a network of some 300 correspondents, businessmen, labor leaders, university presidents, and foundation executives, who constantly forward the names of good prospects for federal jobs. Cost of Careless Driving
At $24 Is Really Cheap

Editor, Post-Crescent:

In reply to the individual who complained about the treatment he received from the Appleton Police Department — what is the price of careless driving? In this case it was only $24.

Since you are a veteran of World War I, you realize the results of handling a weapon carelessly. Yes, an automobile is a weapon. True you only backed into another car — but let's suppose you had backed into a bike rider or a pedestrian crossing in midblock, as so many of us do.

You may say you weren't operating your car carelessly but you must admit that you were guilty of careless backing as you failed to notice the car behind you. I realize the angle parking presents a problem because of ment and threaten to fight to the death against any moderation of the time-honored barriers against the Negro.

In other southern states the leadership has anticipated the problem to some extent and has attempted to apply principles of orderly evolution.

A group of leading Birmingham citizens and businessmen have taken the bull by the horns and have worked out a settlement which has ended the rioting for now. But it remains to be seen if the elected officials of the city will make good on the agreement.

But as Sevareid points out, the problem is not limited to Alabama and Mississippi and the South. It is almost as near at hand in Washington and New York and Chicago.

And Wisconsin is far from immune. As we read in horror of the rioting in Birmingham we should be asking ourselves, What are we doing here at home to prepare for the rise of the Negro to a position of social equality with the White race?

not fully supporting Glenn Davis when he ran for Senator, secondly in not trying to replace Senator Wiley. We are not saying that the Republicans can't win the presidency in 1964. We are saying that the chances look rather dim whoever is the candidate. And we most definitely do not want to lose the ability of John Byrnes in Washington.

Vice President Johnson had no such problem when he ran as an underdog candidate in 1960 because his Senate term had not expired. Had he and Mr. Kennedy lost the election, Senator Johnson would merely have returned to Washington as Senate majority leader. Moreover, Mr. Johnson is a personally wealthy man who could afford temporary retirement if it were necessary.

Perhaps men who will not take the risks involved are not of presidential caliber. But there is a vast difference between foolhardiness and carefully weighing the odds—and the responsibilities.

We have confidence that Mr. Byrnes has the integrity and the intelligence to weigh them well.

of municipalities and counties in such projects as regional highway construction, provision of sewer and water services, fire and police protection, and others.

Looking into the future, this may well be the practical structure upon which a new form of metropolitan government could be introduced by Wisconsin—the formation of service districts for specific functions in providing specific services on a common basis to specific jurisdictions in need of those services.

Here in the Fox River Valley we can see the immediate need for such a set-up.

Under the bill, such a service district could be formed upon petition by the municipalities concerned to the circuit court in the most populous county in the district. The petition would state the name of the district, the area of its jurisdiction, the services to be rendered and the extent of its taxing authority.

The Circuit Court, if it ruled the petition was in order, could order a referendum in the proposed area for approval of the project by the voters. The governing body would be a commission representative of the cities, villages, towns and counties concerned.

The legislation carefully protects the present powers of such municipalities. The powers of the commission thus would be super-municipal in nature.

The tremendous benefits to be gained through this legislation should persuade all municipalities in the Fox River Valley to support it actively.

put in a card file, and when a vacancy occurs the file is culled for prospects. If a particularly difficult position to fill comes up, the qualifications of the man sought are sent to the correspondents for suggestions.

The Civil Service League pointed out recently that one of the chief problems in recruiting topnotch administrators for the federal government is the fact that the salaries of the Cabinet members have not been adjusted since 1956, and that salaries of sub-cabinet rank supervisors have been held down accordingly. Too much importance cannot be attached to securing the best available men in supervisory positions of the government.

BOGSAT is one federal agency we are glad to see the Kennedy administration abolish.

the necessity to watch all sides of your automobile as you back but this does not create too much of a problem for a person who has been driving for 20 or 30 years or so.

Yes you received value for your $24 — value in that no matter how careful you just can't be careful enough. You and I would really complain if some other driver backed from a parking stall and seriously injured or possibly killed a member of our family, and the guilty party received a fine of $24.

In closing I would like to assure you that I am not a member of the Appleton Police Department.

Sevareid Says

Negro Passion of U. S. Today Called True People's Revolution

BY ERIC SEVAREID

By its dominant voices, its most unforgettable faces and its chief acts of bravery does a generation recognize itself and history mark it.

For America, this post-war period is surely the era of the Negro Passion. The most moving voices are now those of Negroes: the most searing, lasting words are put on paper by Negro writers; their music is the American music most penetrating and persuasive to other parts of the world; no cause is now so fundamental to the health and integrity of this society as the Negro cause; of no other leaders are so much stamina and courage demanded as are now required of Negro leaders.

They are bound to win, somehow, not only because their present aims are so limited and unarguable, but because they have succeeded in involving us all, whoever we are, wherever we live within the nations frontiers. They have caught the attention of the whole American people and, more than that, they have caught up the conscience of the whole people, however many of us may try to deny this to ourselves. A newspaper or television picture of a snarling police dog set upon a human being is recorded in the permanent photoelectric file of every human brain.

NO SURCEASE IN SIGHT

This generation is not likely to find surcease from the Negro Passion: its source springs and the resistance to it are too deeply grounded for easy resolution, and its present outburst too long delayed. Its more violent manifestations are not going to be confined to the deep South. The head of black steam building up in places like New York, Washington and Chicago are finding outlets too few and too small, at the present rate, for the permanent avoidance of combustion.

Because this unfolding drama involves the automatic reflexes of the instinctive sense of justice, because it involves namable, hearable, countable individual persons of flesh and blood, it is going to dwarf the general and social pageants of this domestic era, whether they be the struggles to rationalize the inchoate megalapolis, to preserve the open spaces, to eradicate a disease, to "conquer" space, or whatever.

The time is coming, soon, when the Negro Passion will truly dominate American politics. It is going to change the prism through which we consider the problems of far-off nations: romanticism will have to give way to realism. Liberalism of the academic or safe society brand — the motivations of those who rhapsodize over the Peace Corpsmen in Ethiopia or journey 6,000 miles to sit at the feet of Dr. Schweitzer, but who would never dream of visiting the night police court in their own city and observing the tragedy of the American Negro — such impulses are going to lose their present status in the hierarchy of the virtues. There will be a noticeable dearth of hiding places for those professing belief either in their religion or the American Constitution.

CLOSE TO THEIR GOAL

An education in the facts of life and history is in store for those pained by the messy contradictions built in to the Negro Passion. Those bewildered at the Negro uprising ("after all, they had made a lot of progress") may learn that this is one of the eternal lessons from past rebellions against oppression. It is not when the oppression is most complete that these revolutions begin to revolve, but when concessions are given, hopes are born, light is glimpsed at the end of the dark tunnel. It is when an oppressed people feels close to its goal, not far off from it, that their action becomes frenetic.

Those who are cynical or upset by the moral duality in the Negro phenomenon, by the spectacle of lofty courage and self-sacrifice among the Negro leaders, side by side with the spectacle of spreading crime and moral squalor in the slum-bound masses of the Negro poor, may learn that the first is a direct reflection of the second, its natural, not its unnatural partner. Desperation, like war, ennobles some among its victims and debases others. No true people's revolution was ever neat, clean or devoid of sad anomalies.

If the Negro Passion of today is not a true people's revolution, it is as close to one as we have ever known in our land.

Newspapers Get Off
Their Duffs, Go Out
After Better Students

BY JOHN TORINUS

I have been fortunate enough to get out of work several times recently to address groups of college students at Oshkosh State and St. Norbert. And a visit to a co-ed college campus at this time of year is a most pleasant experience. I don't think they made college co-eds this way when I went to school.

I parked my car in Oshkosh on that side street which immediately faces the Memorial Union. As I ambled my way up the street the Union building was decorated by co-eds in warm spring attire sitting on the steps, sunning on the sun deck, and standing at appropriate locations across the facade. I had a sudden urge to go back and pick up those credits in comparative religion or music appreciation that I missed in my own college course.

The experience at St. Norbert was in contrast but equally as pleasant. This was the annual journalism banquet, and the gals were out in their dinner-time finest. I made a great pitch to them to get into the newspaper business. We badly need that kind of talent.

Seriously I was happy to have the opportunity of talking to these college students about the profession of journalism because I am currently chairman of a state committee which is attempting to do something about getting more and better college graduates into the newspaper business. The committee was appointed jointly by the Associated Press Association of Wisconsin and the Wisconsin Daily Newspaper League.

We have now realized in our business that we are losing out on new talent to the recruiting efforts of big businesses and such other professions as engineering, law and medicine.

The first concrete result of our committee's efforts is a summer internship program this year through which we hope to place about 20 students from state colleges and universities in summer jobs with daily newspapers in Wisconsin.

The committee screened applicants from Wisconsin, Marquette and University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee journalism schools, and has made available to the newspapers of the state a list of committee-recommended applicants. A number have already been hired.

Next fall we will extend our recruiting drive into the high schools of the state, conferring with guidance counselors in the schools and providing them with up-to-date reference material on the newspaper business. And next year we hope to extend the summer internship program to all colleges and universities in the state.

The challenges we face in this newspaper business today will require future journalists who are even better prepared professionally than many of us have been. We will need reporters with keen inquiring minds who can dig beneath the surface of stories to tell readers what news events really mean, reporters who can write simply and directly (the hardest way) to convey their message quickly and easily to our readers. We will need editors with a vast background knowledge of the rapidly-changing world in which we live so that they can cull from the terrific volume of news matter every day the really significant stories for display in our pages.

We will also need production men with technical backgrounds in the new fields of computer programming and photoelectronics. We are in the midst of a technological revolution in the newspaper business, and a lot of us are too old to grasp this new science.

As an example, we will need reporters who can operate electric typewriters with a minimum of errors, instead of pecking away as I do with one finger on the right hand and two on the left.

But what we veterans can do is start now to select and train these young future journalists and pose the challenges to them which will force them to grow.

There will always be newspapers in this country, but individually they will have to be better editorially, more efficiently produced and with a very real sense of purpose if they are to survive.

Prohibition Era Adventures Form Special Style of Folklore

BY RAY PY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Those skeletons in the closet of the proud and righteous Fox River Valley get a thorough going over when old timers get together and talk about "moon."

There was a time, they will say, when much of the Fox Valley was in the employ of some of the top Chicago underworld figures. There was a time when local "runners" with high-powered cars, sped valley-made hootch across darkened county roads to the "speaks" of Chicago and Milwaukee.

There was a time when law-trucking firms in operation today got started in the early days of prohibition by carrying booze to market.

A New London farmer "hoodwinked" authorities by carrying his booze to Chicago secreted under the truck bed of a cattle truck. On the bed of a truck, chewing disinterestedly on a cud, one solitary cow made the hundreds of trips back and forth to Chicago.

Runners were not subject to much harassment from law enforcement officials of the time, but they did carry weapons to protect themselves from other judge knew it was there and was one of the best customers.

And those that have made a study of the situation, claim that illegal booze, to this day, is not completely removed from Outagamie County. Rumors run that some of today's finest night-clubs, which got their start in the "roadhouse" era, have quantities of kegs buried in and about the premises, lying perhaps unknown to the current owners.

"You could find that stuff," one man fondly contemplates. "with a mine detector. You could dig it up, and, well, that stuff ought to be pretty ripe. It would probably bring $100 a gallon."

Early day "motels" were set up for the drivers in and around the northern part of the state, where drivers could rest overnight in the comfort and knowledge they were in good hands. Most of the "motels" were financed by Al Capone dollars.

"I knew him," one Outagamie County man said. "I knew Al Capone himself. We weren't too close," he recalls, "and in fact we met only once when he inquired about my health. I recall the phrase exactly — he asked me if I wanted to stay healthy. I did. I went out West for two years.

Capone Advice

The meeting took place in New London during the heyday of the Elwood Hotel, a frequent visiting place for Capone. The Outagamie County man and many of his companions had been removing distilled liquor from the backs of trucks which traveled the roadways to Chicago.

"We'd jump right on the truck," the man recalls, "and take the tins and throw them off the truck as we passed each telephone pole. That way we knew where to look for the tin."

"After one particular raid, we were in the Elwood Hotel celebrating our luck, when himself, Al Capone walked in. He came right up to me and made that inquiry about my health. I never touched one of his trucks again. In fact, I gave up drinking for a while."

Capone "hired" some 700 employees in his empire, and grossed some $110,000,000 annually.

Much of the money was spent in the Fox River Valley.

The handwriting forecasting doom for prohibition hit the wall though in 1933 with the return of "real" beer. Appleton Police Chief George T. Prim, in 1933, with the promised return of real beer on April 7, 1933, said the "speakeasy and its allies, the bootlegger and petty criminal are doomed." He said the return of beer "will probably raise the morale of the entire city."

Big Celebration

The previous 14 years of waiting were well worth the wait for the celebration Wisconsin had planned for the return of "real" beer shortly after midnight on April 7.

Some folks were so eager they petitioned the state attorney general for a decision on whether the legal "real" beer drinking hour was midnight Washington, D. C. time or local time. If the attorney general ruled that the official time was Washington D. C. time, the entire state population could begin soaking one hour earlier.

But such was not the case. The attorney general, in a page one newspaper story declared the drinking time to be 12 mid-night local time, and not Washington, D. C., time.

Other plans to celebrate the return of beer and the end of an era went awry. In Milwaukee, the celebrants howled to a well-directed pressure from church members not to celebrate the return of beer during Passion Week. The official, city-sponsored ceremony was delayed 10 days.

Federal agents, attempting to keep the public in line until the last minute, staged three raids — two during the last week in March in Pulaski and at Wabeno, and another in Shawano two days before the lift on real beer was official.

Meanwhile, local breweries began modernizing programs and ran large newspaper advertisements promising that "we will have real beer April 7." The New London Products Co. put in $30,000 in new equipment, and the George Walter Brewing Co. in Appleton announced a large expansion and modernization program.

Dealers in "real" beer were ordered to buy federal stamps for the initial sales in Appleton, soft drink parlors who were going into real beer sales were told to apply for stamps at the post office.

Herds of prospective beer sellers showed up at the Post-Crescent building, across the street from the post office, and demanded to be sold beer stamps.

Legislators in Madison began arguing laws which would have to be enacted after the coming of "real" beer. One group wanted a ban against steel kegs, hoping that the law would revive the old copper industry in the state.

Another group opposed legislation which would disbar "any person convicted of a prohibition crime from being allowed a beer license. The legislators argued that the law would keep a great many people from making a living and only legislated against those that were unlucky enough or unwise enough to have been caught.

New Year's Eve

Despite a slight rain, and Passion Week, real beer came to Appleton like New Year's Eve. Beer was trucked in because the local breweries found at the last minute they could not meet the production date. Generally, in most places, the first rounds were free.

However, in faraway New York and Chicago, beer sales were as much as 15 cents a glass or 35 cents a bottle, the newspapers reported.

Crime didn't completely halt when the real beer became a fact. One man in Chicago reported that he had purchased his first two cases of real beer and was planning a celebration at home when his car was stopped by two men who held a pistol on him and took the beer.

For a brief period after the real beer, the men who made their fortunes supplying the illegal beer and booze, attempted to force the competition out of business by staging small raids on beer trucks, and large scale attacks on beer breweries.

The arrival of real beer paved the way for the revival of real liquor, which followed the foamy stuff to respectability some seven months later.

Thus Prohibition died, and one news reporter summed up the era when he reported on the celebrations in Appleton that year "... and tomorrow will be just another day, with all the novelty gone."

men were to be ignored, and federal revenue agents despised. There was a time when the farmer who did the least farming, somehow or other earned the most money.

Prohibition. They will say, there was a time.

One man, a law enforcement authority at the time, remembers prohibition in the Fox River Valley as a time "when he was always crawling."

"We crawled up to barns. We crawled through barns. We crawled into and out of barns. We crawled through fields and streams. We crawled, and we crawled and we crawled just looking for illegal stills."

They found them too. In farmhouse chimneys, in smoke houses, under barrels, in bushes, in farm fields, in flour boxes, in town and out of town. When they found them, they closed them down and started crawling again.

Bovine Cover

There was money made making illegal booze, and there was money made carrying it out of the Fox River Valley, too. Some

"hootch" sellers who were attempting to gain new territories.

"As long as they obeyed the traffic regulations," one policeman now recalls, "I let them on their merry way. I stopped one runner near Hortonville one night," he recalls, "and told him his tailights were out."

The policeman still recalls writing out the ticket, discussing the situation and accepting the apology of the driver for not having his light in repair, and all the time looking down the muzzle of a 12 gauge shotgun.

"That's the way it was then. He was doing his job. I was doing mine."

Hidden Cache

Illegal distillers were found in the strangest places — mostly they were in rural areas. But old time courthouse veterans recall with a chuckle the still that operated literally under the judge's bench in the Outagamie County courthouse. The still was operated by a county prisoner in the jail located under the courtroom. Talk, which has grown mellow with age, is that the Sisters of Charity 'Stormed Heaven' for Help for Leukemia Victim; Obtained Miraculous Cure

BY KATHIE DIBELL

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eleven years ago she was dying of blood cancer.

Today Ann Theresa O'Neill is a healthy, happy girl of 15, who likes to date, moons over rock 'n' roll, and can't understand why anybody would want her autograph.

Looking at her now, it is difficult to connect her with a formerly proclaimed miracle of the Roman Catholic Church. But the church so regards her recovery from leukemia. The fact that Ann lives today, despite a normally fatal disease, has been attributed to the intervention of Mother Elizabeth Seton, first native American to be beatified and now a candidate for sainthood.

Gravely ill

It is one of two miracles attributed to Mother Seton, who lived from 1774 to 1821. The other involved the recovery of a Sisters of Charity nun in Louisiana who had a cancerous tumor.

Ann now is a bubbling teenager. But in the spring of 1952, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William O'Neill, were told their 4-year old daughter would die of leukemia.

The gravely ill child had been at St. Agnes' Hospital, run by the Sisters of Charity in Baltimore for several months. The O'Neills took Ann to University Hospital to be treated by a specialist on leukemia.

The doctor confirmed the diagnosis and began treatment with a new drug. Ann improved slightly, but medical authorities could not hope for a cure.

"The treatments were tearing the heart out of us," Mrs. O'Neill recalled.

"Ann would cry, 'Look what they're doing to me, Mother. Take me home. Take me home, Mother.'"

She was taken home March 27, but became worse and was rushed back to St. Agnes on April 9. She had contacted a severe case of chicken pox.

Sister Mary Alice Fowler, head of the children's ward at the time, said the child was "covered with sores from the top of her head to the soles of her feet. Just a pitiful sight."

"It occurred to me," Sister

Mary Alice said, "that Ann would be a good case for Mother Seton to show her power with God."

"I told Mrs. O'Neill, 'Let's get a novena started. We'll storm heaven,' " Sister Mary Alice said.

In the Catholic Church, a novena is a series of prayers offered for a special intent.

"Sister Mary Alice was so enthusiastic, and she inspired all of us," Mrs. O'Neill said.

The nine days of prayers began. The sister told the O'Neills to tell all their friends and relatives to pray. She contacted the mother house of the Sisters of Charity, founded by Mother Seton, in Emmitsburg, Md. All the sisters and all the children in the order's many schools, hospitals, and orphanages in the area prayed to Mother Seton to intercede in Ann's behalf.

First Cure

Sister Mary Alice pinned a tiny piece of ribbon, a secondary relic which had touched a bone of Mother Seton, on Ann's hospital gown.

The next day, April 10, Ann's blood count showed a definite improvement from her previous one April 1.

Ann was so weak she could hardly hold up her head at the beginning of the novena. Sister Mary Alice said, "Then she began to sit up. By the end of the novena, she was able to be out of bed."

On April 27 Ann was discharged from the hospital. The O'Neills and the Sisters of Charity continued praying. On June 2 her blood count was taken again. The doctor said her blood count was normal. It still is.

Leukemia specialists say that her cure is the first such known to medical science.

Met Pope

Last March 17, Ann and her family, Sister Mary Alice and many others of the Sisters of Charity order witnessed the beatification ceremonies for Mother Seton in St. Peter's Basilica in Rome.

The buoyant, dark-haired girl was the center of attention as 6,000 gathered to watch the ceremony.

"The hierarchy that girl has met!" muses Sister Mary Alice.

The highlight of the beatification day for Ann came when she and her mother were presented to Pope John XXIII and kissed his ring.

"I was stunned," remembers Ann.

The Pope? "He just looked so radiant and thrilled to see Ann," says Sister Mary Alice.

After she returned home Ann wanted to settle back to a normal existence. When some of her friends asked for her autograph, she told them: "Oh, get serious."

Ann is a freshman at Seton High School, a girls' parochial school in Baltimore named for Mother Seton. She is an average student.

Normal Teen

She's dating and has one particular favorite but is not going steady.

She enjoys dancing, listening to the record player and the local rock 'n' roll radio station.

Ann scarcely remembers what happened to her when she was 4. "I can remember the needles, and the sores on my mouth. That's about all."

Sister Mary Alice is now in charge of the infants at St. Ann's Infant and Maternity Home at Hyattsville, Md.

With Mother Seton having been beatified, Sister Mary Alice is praying for another miracle. Two more must be attributed to the intervention of Mother Seton before she can be canonized.

BY TOM HENSHAW

NEW YORK (AP) — "Politics," says young Steve Smith fondly, "is fascinating" — and the feeling is becoming mutual.

Politics and the men who practice it are growing more and more fascinated by Steve Smith, the President's quiet, diffident brother-in-law who is a good bet to manage the Kennedy re-election campaign in 1964.

He's warming up for the task right now as the President's political agent in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan, key industrial states that rate high in both electoral votes and Democratic discord.

No small measure of Smith's fascination derives from the fact that he shuns personal publicity.

Senate Campaign

Smith was baptized politically as headquarters office manager, handling personnel and supplies, during Jack Kennedy's successful campaign for reelection as Senator from Massachusetts in 1960.

Early in 1959, when Jack's presidential aspirations took a serious turn, Smith was called to Washington and, from an office overlooking the capitol, he quietly began laying the groundwork for the 1960 campaign.

He handled logistics at first, then rode herd on the Alabama and Florida delegations at the Democratic national convention, and finally settled down as comptroller of campaign funds.

Last year, when Ted Kennedy decided to bring his brother's old Senate seat back into the family, Smith's growing political talents were tapped again, this time as campaign manager.

Now, signs point to Smith, a 5-year-old in politics, as being ready for the big behind-the-scenes job in '64 since Kennedys tend to entrust such tasks only to family members. Brother Bobby managed Jack's campaigns in the past.

"I have neither been asked nor have I discussed it with anyone," says Smith, but not very committally.

Strangely, throughout it all, Smith has managed to remain virtually anonymous.

"During Ted's campaign last fall," recalls Ed Martin, then Kennedy's press secretary, "someone asked for a biography of Steve. I got the information, but I had to drag the answers out of him, one by one."

Family Man

Sen. Ted Kennedy remembers the night last May when he won the endorsement of the Democratic state convention in Massachusetts after a bitter fight with State Atty. Gen. Edward McCormack.

"We came back to the hotel to have a small celebration," he says. "We looked around for Steve. He had already gone home to his family."

The Smith family numbers four, including wife Jean and sons, Stephen Jr., 5, and William, 2, who was born on Grandfather Joe's 72nd birthday. They live in a cooperative apartment at 76th Street and Fifth Avenue, only a 20-minute walk from Smith's New York office.

Likes Details

Another anecdote about Smith comes from Jerry Doherty, young new chairman of the Massachusetts State Democratic Committee.

"Last election night, Steve impressed on everyone that they must have a badge to get into headquarters. When Steve showed up without a badge, the guard wouldn't let him in. 'It must have been 45 minutes before he convinced me he really was Steve Smith.'" usually obsessed with detail," says Doherty, who worked closely with Smith through both primary and election campaigns last year.

After Ted Kennedy had walloped McCormack in the primary and while most Kennedy workers celebrated, Smith drew Doherty aside and told him: "I think we should get letters out to the McCormack people by Thursday."

"We did," recalls Doherty. "About 2,700 of them."

It was Smith who insisted on setting up a personal Kennedy switchboard at a Springfield hotel during the Democratic state convention last year. Some Kennedy people weren't sold on the idea.

"Steve demonstrated," says Doherty. "He placed calls through the house phone and then the switchboard. He proved that if we made 50 or 60 calls an hour we would lose 20 minutes out of every 60."

"Because of our fast and constant checking of delegates, we were only three votes off in the final total."

Work First

Smith shares the Kennedy view that winning elections is hard work. The fun comes later.

The night before the balloting at the Springfield convention, Kennedy workers gathered in a hotel suite. Outside, there was a fiesta air as other candidates partied for delegates.

"Look at those guys out there," said Steve Smith in disgust. "They're having fun and getting drunk. Where will they be tomorrow?"

"There were some pretty hard guys in our crowd," recalls Doherty. "But, you know, I'll bet none of them even had one drink."

Smith will take a drink himself, usually a glass of beer or two. Sometimes at parties, if a glass of something stronger is placed in his hand, he'll sip it sociably.

Lost Weight

At the height of last fall's campaign, his working day began at 8:30 a. m. and ended anywhere between 11 p. m. and 2 a. m. He spent weekends at the Kennedy summer home in Hyannis Port, checking in by phone with Doherty on Saturday night and twice on Sunday.

When the campaign was over, Smith was down to 148 pounds, 12 pounds under his normal 160, which he weighed in college 15 years ago. He stands a slender 5-foot-11, looks smaller.

Steve Smith grew up in Brooklyn, playing roller hockey ("I was the goalie") in the city streets despite the fact that his family was well-to-do.

"When people kid him about marrying into a rich family," says Doherty, "Steve retorts, 'My family had money before the Kennedys had money.'"

The money came from Cleary Brothers Inc., a water transportation company founded nearly 100 years ago by grandfather William E. Cleary, who also served seven years in Congress as a Democratic representative from New York.

Grandfather Cleary lived with the Smiths in Brooklyn until his death in 1937 and, recalls his grandson, "There was some talk of politics around the house, but I didn't pay much attention."

Played Hockey

Smith went to Polytechnic Preparatory Country Day School in Brooklyn, playing on its ice hockey, lacrosse and baseball teams. He also played hockey for the Armour Meat Packers in a Sunday afternoon amateur league.

He majored in social science at Georgetown; he argued on the debating team and held class office during his first two years. Then he abruptly dropped these politically tinted activities. "I guess others just got more interested in it than I," he says.

Besides, he was busy organizing an informal Georgetown hockey team. Since the school did not recognize the sport, the players raised their own funds and arranged their own schedule.

After college in 1948 — he went through in three years, thanks to summer school — he played three games for the New York AC team, but a shipyard foot injury forced him to give it up.

ROTC Commission

He still skates for recreation, plays golf ("80 to 85, closer to 85") and tennis ("on the short side of good").

He came out of Georgetown's ROTC course with a five-year reserve commission in the Air Force and went on active duty in 1951. He wound up at Otis Air Department's special operations center.

When Joe Kennedy suffered a stroke in December 1961, Smith returned to New York to manage the family business. He still devoted two or three days a week to business and the rest to politics.

He enjoys most the political part of it.

"A political campaign," he says with a glow, "calls for the fullest use of your physical and mental capacities. Anyone who gets into it seems to like it. Not many retire — at least, not willingly."

Smith's enjoyment of politics and the things that go with it bubbled unobtrusively to the surface on election eve last fall at a dance in a hall deep in the Irish heart of Boston.

There on the stage, the center of all eyes, was Ted Kennedy, Boish Looking, Quiet Steve (officially Stephen E.) Smith, President John F. Kennedy's brother-in-law, at work at Democratic National headquarters in Washington. Force Base in Falmouth, Mass., for 14 months until his reserve contract was up.

After service Smith went to work with his brothers, John and Philip, in the family business. He lacked enthusiasm for the job. When the opportunity came to go to work for Joe Kennedy's vast business empire in 1955, he took it.

"As brothers we got along reasonably well," he says. "But I was not unhappy to leave."

On the job, he also took to going out with the boss' daughter. He and Jean Kennedy were old friends, so old that he can't really remember when he first met her.

"I saw her a couple of times when she was going to school at Manhattanville," he recalls. "And I saw her once or twice while I was stationed at Otis, near the Kennedy home on the Cape."

They went together for a year before they were married in May 1956 in St. Patrick's Cathedral, with Francis Cardinal Spellman officiating and the personal blessing of Pope Pius XII read at the end of the nuptial mass.

Family Worker

Smith has never really stopped working for the Kennedy enterprises, except for brief tours in Washington with the Development Loan Fund and the State candidate for the U. S. Senate, leading the crowd in singing a particularly raucous campaign song called "Hey, Massachusetts."

Hong Kong Sells Radios to U. S.

HONG KONG (AP) — The United States was the chief buyer of Hong Kong transistor radio receiving sets in 1962, importing more than 595,000 sets worth $3,190,000.

This British colony exported a total of 1,040,932 sets valued at $6,370,000 last year compared with 263,423 sets at $2,220,000 in 1961.

This Really Gets Right to the Heart

DENISON, Iowa (AP) — A Denison pork plant ran a newspaper ad which included the slogan, "From the Heart of the Beef Empire."

But the second time the firm ran the ad the slogan had been changed to read: "From the heart of the Meat Empire."

Birth Control Bill Ready for Hearing

80 Others to Be Studied by Legislature

MADISON (AP) — With time marching on, legislative committees this week will turn their attention to listening to the pros and cons of 80 bills and resolutions.

National as well as state attention probably will center on the controversial bill introduced by Sen. Davis Donnelly, D - Eau Claire, to permit county welfare agencies to counsel relief recipients on birth control methods and to permit payment for contraceptive articles or drugs prescribed by physicians.

The Senate Public Welfare Committee has scheduled the measure for public hearing Thursday. The subject involves not only a question of state policy, but of religious beliefs and has stirred much comment since Donnelly presented his bill to the Senate.

Another major measure, to be heard jointly by the Senate and Assembly Public Welfare committees, would provide hospital care under the federal Kerr-Mills Act for those over 65 but with limited incomes. It is estimated to cost the state $10.4 million a biennium.

The Joint Finance Committee Wednesday has two proposals before it affecting county superintendents of schools. One would abolish the office, the other would create cooperative educational service agencies to replace services now performed by the county superintendent's office, at about the same annual cost to the state.

A series of proposals for the licensing and inspection of establishments that slaughter animals and poultry, the revision of weights and measures laws, the definition of milk and permission for color additives in apple and cherry products has been scheduled for a hearing Tuesday by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Oleomargarine will be back on the scene Wednesday at a hearing by the Assembly Agriculture Committee on a bill to prohibit use of additives or flavoring in oleo that is not permitted in butter.

Veterans Affairs

The Senate Governmental and Veterans Affairs Committee has scheduled hearings for both Tuesday and Wednesday. Bills heard Tuesday include proposals to require all local governments to adopt flood plan zoning ordinances, authorize the Board of Health to order towns to construct sewerage systems; and permit counties to regulate boating on a county wide basis. Wednesday the committee will consider bills to appropriate $3 million to the veterans housing loan fund and to increase the maximum housing loan to $4,000, now $3,500.

A major bill to amend the unfair trade practices laws to make it unlawful to discriminate in prices charged consumers will be before the Senate Judiciary Committee Wednesday. The committee also will consider a resolution to change the Constitution to permit state aid for transporting parochial school children.

Tuesday the Senate Labor, Taxation Insurance and Banking Committee will handle a bill to require the truthful labeling of consumer commodities and will hear arguments on a proposal to increase state aids to schools.

Also on the agenda of the Judiciary Committee Wednesday is a bill to increase salaries of circuit judges to $20,000 a year for terms beginning in June, and to set pay for justices of the Supreme Court at $25,000 and $25,000 for the chief justice, for terms beginning in July.

Driver Arrested for Speed, Going Too Slow

WESTFIELD, N.Y. (AP)—Robert Sexton of North East, Pa., was arrested for speeding. Minutes later, the same state trooper arrested him for going too slow.

Trooper George Domedion said he halted Sexton's speeding car near this Chautauque County village. He told Sexton to follow the patrol car to the home of a peace justice. Sexton inched along at 10 miles an hour, the trooper said.

Sexton pleaded guilty to both charges. Peace Justice William Harris of Portland ordered him jailed pending payment of a $20 speeding fine. The justice suspended payment on the other charge.

King said the agreement provides:

1. Desegregation of lunch counters, rest rooms, fitting rooms, and drinking fountains in downtown stores in planned stages within the next 90 days.

2. The upgrading and hiring of Negroes on a nondiscriminatory basis, including the hiring of Negroes as clerks and salesmen within the next 60 days.

3. Arrangements for the release of all persons arrested during racial demonstrations on bond or for the personal recognition.

4. Communications between Negroes and white persons to be re-established within the next two weeks.

The agreement has no official status. The committee was composed of a representative group of businessmen, according to its chairman, Sidney Smyer Sr., a lawyer and real estate broker.

famous cardiologist on board," she said. "I went to the passenger and asked him if he would have a look. The gentleman was very kind."

Deciding the copilot was too ill to be moved, the doctor began working with him where he lay.

A Relapse

Dr. Crafoord, who later caught another flight to London en route home, said Segala at first appeared to be recovering.

A relapse caused the doctor to decide on an emergency tracheotomy—cutting into the copilot's windpipe and inserting a tube to allow him to breathe. Using a knife from the gallery—sterilized with alcohol — and the plane's first aid equipment, the doctor completed the surgery in a minute and a half.

Capt. Ferucio Carboni radioed ahead to New York for an ambulance to meet the plane.

Then for an hour and a half the doctor and members of the 19-member crew took turns massaging Segala's heart externally, "even during the landing," Mrs. Stapler said.

Plan Special Observance of Paper Week

ing its own activities. Some of them are:

Appleton Coated Paper Co. — Employee family day Friday.

Bergstrom Paper Co., Neenah — Employee family days on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Consolidated Papers Inc. — Employee family days at the plant's various mills on varying days of the week.

Fox River Paper Corp. — Employee family day.

Gilbert Paper Co., Menasha — Internal publicity program.

Kimberly-Clark Corp. — Employee family days at several mills.

Marathon Division of American Can Co. — Internal publicity program.

Riverside Paper Corp. — Employee family day.

John Strange Paper Co., Menasha — Employee family day held Saturday.

Thilmany Pulp and Paper Co., Kaukauna — Employee family tours throughout the week, plus some public groups. Slide film presentation. The company is not the starting up of its new No. 13 paper machine.

Special Coordinators
Many of the mills have appointed special coordinators to work out the in-mill observances in cooperation with the Wisconsin Paper Industry Information Service, Neenah.

The information service has tried to inform the people about the benefits of a stable economy brought about because of the paper industry and its many forward looking programs. It has told, for instance, about:

An entire new industry employing more than 300 workers with an annual payroll of more than $1.5 million created by pulp and paper mills in their campaign to reduce discharge of spent sulphite liquor.

The Trees for Tomorrow program, a unique industry development program founded by nine mills in 1944 which now distributes 325,000 free trees annually, plants another 500,000 for private landowners, prepares forest management plans for 25,000 acres of private land, and operates Trees for Tomorrow camp at Eagle River.

Paper Institute

The Institute of Paper Chemistry, gathering place for knowledge from all papermaking areas of the world, and its outstanding library of books and papers in the paper field. Only this week it was revealed that Institute scientists developed a special filter paper which played a key role in determining the amount of radioactive debris in the earth's atmosphere.

The development of industry planned planting and harvesting programs which assure an adequate supply of wood for the state's mills.

The Paper Week observance has special significance in the Fox River Valley, where paper is the major industry of many cities, with many other industries here because of their close affiliation with it. In Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Kaukauna, Kimberly, Little Chute and Combined Locks, and the adjacent towns which make up the Fox Cities area, more than three-quarters of the industrial payroll comes from paper manufacturing or some other business directly related to paper.

New Hampshire Bishop Denounces State's New Sweepstakes Law

CLAREMONT, N.H. (AP)—The Episcopal bishop of New Hampshire denounced the state's new sweepstakes law today as a miserable intruder on the state and nation.

The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Hall, told the 161st annual convention of the Episcopal diocese of New Hampshire that the country is confused by the action of a state that has always had a reputation for healthy independence.

"I trust that the citizens of New Hampshire will rise up to rebuke this miserable intruder and destroy its claim upon the interests of our state and nation," the bishop said.

Pope Faces Deals With Red Nations On Cardinal Mindszenty's Freedom

BY GEORGE WELLER

Chicago Daily News Service

VATICAN CITY—Pope John, recovering from a stomach ailment, is facing three complex deals between the Vatican and Communist Hungary and Poland.

They involve:

The fates of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, seven years a fugitive in the U.S. legation in Budapest, and his "impeded" bishops.

The legal status of Catholicism in the "Polish-administered" Oder-Neisse territories, still claimed by the Germans.

The daring new idea of sending low level consular representatives to Iron Curtain countries as a step toward recognition.

The Pope also is burdened with a heavy program of public duties, including receiving the $100,000 Balzan prize and making a cross-city call on Italian President Antonio Segni.

In his deliberations over the "Church of Silence" the Pope will have the advice of Poland's Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, who arrived Wednesday, and Austria's Franz Cardinal Koenig, who opened the Hungarian negotiations a fortnight ago.

The Vatican already had a secret envoy in Budapest in Msgr. Agostino Casaroli has succeeded in obtaining the end of house detention for four Hungarian bishops.

Backs Demand

The Vatican is apparently backing up the demand of Mindszenty that the Hungarians agree to allow him to fill the vacant bishoprics of Eger and Pecs, to appoint an apostolic administrator in his place so that he remains primate, even in Rome, and to break up the fellow traveling organization of "Peace Priests" headed by the excommunicated art fancier, the Rev. Istvan Balog.

In Poland Cardinal Wyszynski is trying to reach a compromise by halfway legalizing the now irregular status of the Catholic bishops in the Oder-Neisse area.

Despite heavy Polish communist pressure Pope John has so far held firmly to the precedent of Pope Pius XII in refusing to formalize these bishoprics until a Polish-

German treaty determines the boundaries of the territory.

The compromise for which the Cardinal is purportedly seeking the Pope's sanction is that the bishops will become "ordinaries."

This is a peculiar halfway status, already used by Russian and Ukrainian Catholic communities in the United States, where the bishops have personal but not territorial authority.

The Warsaw government, though it allowed only about half the Polish bishops to come to Rome for the Ecumenical Council, has now permitted two bishops of the Wyszynski-Bishop Boleslaw Kominek of Breslau and Bishop Antoni Baraniak of Poznan.

The Pope's hardest decision is whether to go ahead with a plan affecting all the Iron Curtain countries for appointing consular officials. His own experience as Vatican envoy in Bulgaria has encouraged him. The legal pattern was laid out in the Vatican's official Osservatore Vaticano by the Chief of Protocol and leading jurist, Msgr. Ignazio Cardinal.

But this step requires long consideration because the Pope is already under heavy though indirect fire for having favored the Kremlin in pre-electoral negotiations regional contests next week, which allegedly led to a slide of complete in the finals at Manti-twooc June 13-15.

BY MARGUERITE SCHUMANN
It is no longer news when both father and son in a family attend Lawrence College but there is still an element of novelty when both father and son come from Kobe, Japan, to attend Lawrence. That is the case with Tadayoshi Hayakawa now enrolled as a special student; he is following in the remote footsteps of his father, Thomas Hayakawa of the class of 1925.

An education at Lawrence was brought to a particularly dramatic climax for the father, when his dormitory Brokaw Hall caught fire shortly before the end of his senior year.

The elder Hayakawa recalled at the time he wrote to Lawrence about his son's application: "The local newspaper reported that I was killed instantly when I took a swim dive out of the third floor window, and hit head first on the pavement below. So when I escaped from the hospital, ran back to the college and suddenly joined the line of graduation parade, with cap and gown on. I caused a mild sensation among the people in the parade. This one of the numerous happy memories I still cherish of my alma mater."

Thomas Hayakawa continued: "Despite an earnest wish to revisit dear old Appleton and Lawrence in particular, Fate has never smiled on me during these many years. Now, my son has grown up in the meantime and

Tadayoshi Hayakawa

The elder Hayakawa had been jailed for a time, his son reports, for opposing the military. The whole family came close to obliteration; they had been living in Hiroshima, but only a month before the atomic bomb was dropped they moved to a village 25 miles away. The father still commuted by 22 "guys" (his word) at Alexander into Hiroshima, and was later Gyinnasium; mingles happily due to leave the Monday morning the bomb fell. He and his wife were walking together toward the front and back, and moccasin station, when they were detained loafers slotted for mad money. He plans to spend next year in delay caused Hayakawa to miss New York working for IBM, then his train. He has never since complained at the length of work that sets him apart is his constant, well-thumbed companion—he missed was melted by the a Japanese-English dictionary.

Strong and Silent

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Oscar Thomas King, Jr. is the silent type. When he pulled a 3-year-old boy from the path of a truck, he didn't even tell his mother. She heard about it from neighbor children. The word got around, though, and 13-year-old Tommy received a certificate of heroism from the Boy Scouts.

bomb on the outskirts of Hiroshima.

Tadayoshi, then about eight years old, remembers seeing the B-29s that carried the bomb, as well as the sight of the mushroom cloud towering above the intervening mountains. His school was converted into a hospital; he remembers seeing casualties piled 10 to 20 persons high outside the doors. The women of the village, his mother included, became nurses. The sights in the hospital kept them from eating for days.

That is long ago, however, and today Tadayoshi Hayakawa is a student at Lawrence, gathering fore the atomic bomb was his own happy memories of alma mater. He is both a student and a teacher—he teaches karate to his old friend employed by the Tokyo office of IBM, he assisted Tadayoshi in coming to America.

In the meantime, however, the Hayakawas, both father and son, had survived a bitter war, although two other Hayakawa sons had not. (They died as children, of insufficient medical attention in a mountain village where the Hayakawas had taken refuge.)
